VOLPE PAL HELD IN GANG SLAYING

We Are Highwaymen, Now, Poor Baby Orang, Slaughtering the Macon, One Twin Died.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

BY THE PRESIDENT'S decision, France and England, not having paid their debts, are officially declared in default, and will not be allowed to borrow in this country, even from private sources. This will not be pleasing to England or France or to international American bankers, but it will suit the American people.

Europe may not hold American dollars at so low a price, now that she is no longer able to borrow them by the carload, or import our United States gold by the neat little barrelful.

AFTER THE President announced the default, and this country's refusal to accept any pretty little token, the London Evening Star, in big type, called the President's announcement a "highwayman act by the United States."

Considering that the British government is bullying Germany over a miserable little debt of $120,000,000, the British welchers should not object to the President telling them that they are in default when they are in default, and owe five thousand millions. The British attitude is like that of the French gambler whom the late Oliver H. P. Belmont described. Somebody said, "Sir, you cheat." The gambler replied:

"I know it, but I do not like to be told about it."

PERHAPS THE President will find means to do something more effective than merely declaring the welching nations "in default." Those nations, much interested in shipping, use the Panama Canal on the same terms as American shipping, and their rates might well be doubled. They use American docks and harbors, on the same basis as those that pay their debts. Something might be done in that direction.

President Roosevelt is no "highwayman," but some European financial highwaymen may learn, before it is over, that he knows how to deal with gentlemen of a certain kind.

HUMAN MOTHERS, the young, nervous kind, should be warned by the fate of Betty, Chicago's two-pound orang-utan, and Betty's mother.

Surroundings in the zoo made the loving orang-utan mother intensely nervous and she worried about her baby so much that her supply of milk gave out. The mind affects the mammary glands. She would allow nobody near her baby to feed it artificially, and keepers feared that she would kill the baby if they tried to take it from her. It was pitiful to see her try to feed her baby with milk from her mouth which she took from a can in the cage.

The first rule is RELAX, try not to be made nervous. Easy to advise, hard to do.

A LOT OF heavier than air planes were sent somewhere, in imitation warfare, and the big Macon was sent along, too. This column pointed out the foolishness of that proceeding, sending such a ship deliberately against a swarm of enemy planes. The intelligent "high command" in this enterprise displayed all the intelligence of a ground mole. As well send a cow among rabid bull terriers.

NATURALLY, the high command now reports that the Macon was put out of commission. The same thing would happen to the cow.

If the intellectual high command will read about the battle of Jutland and the service rendered there by a German Zeppelin, he will know more about the proper use of lighter than air craft.

The question is, could some navy gentleman, for obscure reasons, possibly be interested in discrediting the value of the lighter than air ship?

President Roosevelt may want to know about that.

IN BROOKLYN boy twins have been fighting pneumonia, with oxygen to help them. Little Roy, who weighed only two and a half pounds at birth, died yesterday. His brother, Ross, weight at birth six and one-half pounds, lives on. Where did that twin go when he lost his fight?

Did he return whence he came, to start back here again, as a humble little servant of omnipotence, to help improve this earth? Did he go to heaven, as all hope he did, to fly around in perpetual bliss? Or, as some think, coldly, did his little drop of consciousness go back to the source of life, whence it came, as the falling raindrop eventually returns to the ocean?

GERMANY'S preparations for war in the air, especially the alleged efficiency of her German-invented "airplane predictor," should interest us.

The Germans are developing the world's greatest fighting air fleet, in competition with France, buying engines in the United States, England, wherever they can get them, keeping preparations secret.

The "plane predictor," detecting the approach of aircraft while beyond human sight and hearing, working with marvelous efficiency, is far superior to anything that other nations have developed.

The "predictor" can locate approaching aircraft, even though invisible, "establishing the number of planes and their exact distance."

Germans have also developed a quick-firing anti-aircraft gun, with five revolving barrels, a firing capacity of twelve hundred shots per minute, and a range of three miles. Three of these guns arranged in a triangle with the airplane "predictor" in the center, according to German experts, would make the approach of any airplane impossible, even though hidden

U. S. GOLFERS RETAIN CUP

BULLETIN.

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, May 12.—The United States golfers retained the Walker Cup, emblem of international amateur team supremacy, by defeating their British rivals here today.

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, May 12.—(AP.)—Leading an apparent American rout of the last British golfing challenge, Johnny Goodman, of Omaha, the United States open champion, sprang a sensational finish to crush the Hon. Michael Scott, British amateur titleholder, by 7 and 6, in the first of eight singles matches, closing the Walker Cup competition today.

The Americans entered the final day's play leading, 3 to 1, and quickly gained command of the individual play.

W. Lawson Little, of San Francisco, playing the most consistently fine golf of the American team throughout the day, completed his conquest of Cyril Tolley, veteran former British amateur champion, with a 7-and-5 victory.

In other matches, George T. Dunlap, Jr., United States amateur champion, was 2 up on Jack McLean after 27 holes, and Francis Ouimet, United States, was 6 up on Leonard Crawley at the same point. Johnny Fisher, United States, was 3 up on Eric Fiddian after 23 holes.

Max Marston, opposing Tony Torrance, was the only American trailing his opponent during the playing of the second 18 holes of the 36-hole matches.

HELSINGFORS, Finland, May 12.—(AP.)—Six hundred families lost their homes in a fire which swept through the village of Kannus yesterday.

HEINZ LOSES VOTE FIGHT IN COURT

Petition to Get Job Of Sheriff Gollmar Turned Down

John Heinz, Democratic nominee for Sheriff, today lost his fight to upset the election of Frank I. Gollmar, the successful Republican nominee.

Judge Frank P. Patterson, in a 12-page opinion, turned down Heinz' petition to throw out the vote in 21 districts.

Heinz contended, for one thing, that ballots in disputed districts were stolen.

Gollmar's majority in the election was some 250 votes.

Since his defeat Heinz has been named chief of the Fire Department by Mayor McNair.

Heinz contended that in the last November election, in the disputed districts, unqualified persons were allowed to vote, others were illegally assisted in casting their ballot and, in the Seventeenth Ward, bandits stole 163 ballots.

But Judge Patterson, in his opinion, retorted that Heinz had not offered specific evidence to support his charges.

Gollmar's majority in the election was 251 votes. Official figures gave Golimar 166,752 and Heinz 166,501.

Heinz, who since his defeat was named chief of the Fire Department by Mayor McNair, said he was not surprised at the court's opinion. He added that he was in favor of carrying the fight to the higher courts, but:

"I'll take my lawyer's advice."

INDICT SUSPECT IN KEENAN PLOT

W. Walter Dolan, 45, of 1303 Denniston avenue, today was indicted by a federal grand jury on a charge of sending threatening letters through the mail in an attempt to extort money from J. F. Keenan, of the Schenley apartments, elderly president of Haugh and Keenan Storge and Transfer Company.

Dolan, a former employe of Keenan, was arrested in his home March 30. The letters were mailed on March 17, 19 and 21.

The grand jury also indicted Robert A. Cunningham, 32, of 221 Millvale avenue, head teller of the Forbes National Bank, on a charge of embezzling $26,500 from the bank on May 4.

Cunningham is reported to have returned all but $3,750 to the bank. He is at liberty under $3,000 bond.

Lindy and Anne Halt Here on Mystery Flight

As informally as trolley riders, Col. Lindbergh and Anne Lindbergh dropped their ship onto the County Airport today, had breakfast and took off again.

It was just like that. The Colonel didn't say where they had flown from, nor where they were going. The ship headed north from Pittsburgh.

They were flying a yellow monocoupe cabin plane. They stopped out of the ship and into the airport restaurant, where Lindy—even as you and I—had coffee and doughnuts, and his wife limited herself to orange juice.

They arrived at 9:15 a. m. and 15 minutes later they were off.

A spokesman for Transcontinental and Western Air said that the Colonel may be on an inspection trip to St. Louis.

The airport was virtually deserted when the Lindberghs arrived.

When the Colonel ordered 30 gallons of gas tanked into his ship, George Dickson, airport dispatcher, asked him his destination. Lindbergh was quoted as replying:

"Some place . . . I'm going till I run out of gas."

EXCHANGE BILL IN FINAL BOUT

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP.)—A last-minute drive for greater liberalization of the securities act of 1933 preceded today an assured final approval of the stock market control bill.

Several Senators proposed more sweeping changes in the securities act than suggested in the amendment offered by Chairman Fletcher, of the Banking Committee.

Democratic leaders were confident, however, that they could beat off efforts to widen Fletcher's proposal.

Although the Senate met an hour earlier than usual yesterday and stayed in session up to the dinner hour, it was unable to reach a final vote on the market control bill. Leaders called the chamber back into session at 10 o'clock this morning, however, to assure final action before adjourning for the week-end.

Former Pittsburgher Dies in Miami Home

The body of Mrs. Beatrice T. Phager, about 60, formerly of Pittsburgh, was found last night in a house which she occupied alone at Miami, Fla., according to an Associated Press dispatch. Investigators believe death was due to natural causes.

Mrs. Phager, who recently left this city to reside in Florida, leaves a daughter, Mrs. Rena Littell, of the Coronado Apartments, a teacher in the Lincoln School here.

Bucharest Doubts Shooting of Magda

BUCHAREST, May 12.—(INS.)—Reports from Paris that Mme. Magda Lupescu had been twice wounded at her hotel here were generally discredited here today.

The reports said the shooting of King Carol's friend occurred at 10:30 this morning. At noon, however, King Carol delivered a speech at the opening of a Bucharest exhibition. An official denial was expected.

Woman, 120, Survivor Of 5 Husbands, Dies

TEMUCO, Chile, May 12.—(AP.)—Gregoria Monje Santander, who survived five husbands and who computed her age at 120 years, died here yesterday.

She said she recalled vividly terrifying incidents of the earthquake which demolished Concepcion in 1835 and remembered also being captured and borne to the hills by Indians a century ago.

Homestead Thieves Get Loot of $200

The United Candy Company, 230 East Eighth avenue, Homestead, was entered by thieves last night and $200 worth of candy and cigars stolen. Attempts to break open a safe failed.

The thieves gained entrance by jimmying a rear window.

FAMILY SET TO RANSOM OIL MAN

Go-Between Puzzled By Five Messages Asking Fortune

LOS ANGELES, May 12.—(AP.)—Ready to pay any ransom up to $75,000 for the return of William F. Gettle, Beverly Hills millionaire, Ernest E. Noon, the family's intermediary, waited today for instructions from the kidnapers.

Confused by four telephone calls and a letter dealing with the ransom payment, Noon expressed confidence Gettle was alive and the kidnapers soon would come forward with definite plans for delivery of the money.

The first telephone call set the ransom at $75,000, but no indication was given how contact was to be made.

The second and third telephone calls were made while Noon was absent from his office, the caller stating the attorney should insert a personal advertisement in a Los Angeles newspaper if he wished to get in touch with him.

LETTER ASKS $40,000

The letter, unsigned, was delivered by mail at the Arcadia estate of Gettle, where the wealthy oil man was kidnaped by two armed men Thursday morning. The letter informed Mrs. Gettle to have $40,000 in cash ready, and said instructions would be sent as to how the money was to be paid.

The fourth telephone message, received by Noon late last night, said the kidnapers had decided on $40,000 as the ransom.

Authorities said they were inclined to believe the telephone calls received by Noon were from cranks.

Noon, however, said he hoped the kidnapers would get in touch with him quickly. He said he had the cash ready and was willing to pay.

Probability that Gettle was kidnaped by "a very dangerous mob of professional criminals" was expressed by authorities today.

They said identity of these suspected men is known, and efforts are being made to trace their recent movements.

MEXICO FLIGHT HINT

Police also were checking on recent airplane trips across the border into Mexico on the theory that Gettle may have been taken there to await payment of ransom.

One puzzling feature was cleared up late last night when W. G. Everett, manager of an apartment house at 611 South Serrano avenue, of which Gettle is the owner, told the authorities he had written the "bill—611—colonial style" notes which were left at newspaper offices the day Gettle was kidnaped.

Everett explained he acted without consulting the family in the belief the kidnapers might get in touch with him. He had appealed to the kidnapers to inform Gettle of the coded note, saying Gettle would understand, and that he would act as soon as written instructions were received from the kidnaped man.

Police, Sheriff's officers and Department of Justice agents have left the Gettle Beverly Hills and Arcadia estates and Noon's office unprotected to permit the family to negotiate with the kidnapers.

ROBLES KIDNAP DEAL WAITED

TUCSON, Ariz., May 12.—(AP.)—Authorities, the family and the public waited today for some indication the abductors of June Robles, 6-year-old heiress, were moving toward her release.

By request of the Robles family, authorities remained out of the case, leaving Fernando Robles, father of the victim, to bargain for her release unmolested.

There was nothing early today to indicate he had made any contact with the kidnapers, who seized June as she returned home from school here April 25.

Boy, 10, 'Kidnaped,' Father Blamed

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn., May 12.—(AP.)—Percy Lamar Armstrong, 10, grandson of the late Gov. Austin Peay, was missing from his home after having left school yesterday with a man described by a spokesman for the family, as resembling the boy's father, from whom his mother was divorced several years ago.

The spokesman, A. B. Broadbent, an attorney, described the family as "much disturbed" over the boy's disappearance, although he said it was felt that the lad was in the company of his father.

Study Liquor Demand In License Renewals

HARRISBURG, May 12.—(AP.)—The State Liquor Control Board plans to determine public demand before renewing hotel and restaurant liquor licenses.

Records are being kept of each licensee's purchases from the state stores and the board says the demand for service will influence consideration of applications for a second year's license.

Largest Bootleg Still Seized in Raid

CHICAGO, May 12.—(AP.)—Twenty internal revenue agents yesterday raided a huge distillery and seized 20,000 gallons of alcohol. E. C. Yellowley, alcoholic tax unit supervisor, said the still was larger than any found here in the prohibition era.

FEARS HOLDUP, KILLS MAN

BUTLER, Pa., May 12.—A man was run down and killed at 1:30 a. m. today by a motorist who thought he was being held up.

Along the Petersville road, Arthur Saylor, of Petersville, told the State Police that a man, with two companions, held up his hands as if to flag the car.

Saylor sped on. The man was killed instantly. He was identified as Dallas McClelland, 24, of Renfrew.

Saylor himself notified the police. He was not arrested. An inquest was scheduled for Thursday.

Pittsburgh Women Hurt in Auto Crash

GREENSBURG, Pa., May 12.—(AP.)—Two Pittsburgh women, injured in an automobile collision last night are in a Greensburg hospital in a serious condition.

They are Miss Mary Williams, 25, of East End, Pittsburgh, and Mrs. Marie Smith, of Homestead.

14 Persons, 25 Cents Seized in Police Raid

Raiding a house at 1506 Warner street, North Side, police early today arrested Joseph Enon, 30, on a charge of keeping a disorderly house, and 13 visitors. Police reported confiscating a pair of dice and 25 cents.

ARNOLD MAN TAKEN FOR 'RIDE'

Slain to Seal Lips, Wife Sobs; Says She Knows Killers

BULLETIN.

Joe Rosa, scheduled to go on trial Monday in connection with the Ban Box bombing, was held for questioning by county detectives today in connection with the racketeer murder of Patsy Arabia, of Arnold. Investigators said the slaying had been linked with activities of the Volpe gang.

Patsy Arabia's wife told him not to go out with those men, but Patsy went, and early today he was found murdered along a lonely road near Oakmont.

Arabia was taken for a ride. A bullet was sent through his head, then he was tossed from an auto along Cox Comb road in Plum Township.

William Swyers stumbled over the body on the edge of Deputy Constable Leroy McCready's farm.

Arabia, 38, lived with his wife and four children at 1409 Fourth avenue, Arnold, now a part of New Kensington. He had been arrested more than once on gambling and disorderly conduct charges, Arnold police reported.

ODDS FIVE-TO-ONE

Arabia's wife, Anna, collapsed in their home when she heard the news. Recovered, she said her husband had left the house at 9 o'clock last night to meet five men. She related:

"I told him not to go, but he did. I just knew he was going to be killed. When he took his gun I said, 'Patsy, if you go out with those men tonight you are going for a ride.'

"There were five against one. They didn't want his money; they wanted his mouth shut."

KNOWS KILLERS

Mrs. Arabia said she knew who the five were.

And they didn't want his money, for they left in his clothes $69.20, a loaded .38 caliber revolver, a gold watch and a diamond stickpin.

A trail of blood led 25 feet from Arabia's hat to his body. Condition of the body indicated he had been beaten before the fatal shot was fired.

Philadelphia Orders Racket Leader Drive

PHILADELPHIA, May 12.—(AP.)—City police are under orders to "go after the big shots" in the "numbers racket" and stop bringing in petty offenders.

The order was issued yesterday by Judge Raymond MacNeille as the May grand jury handed down indictments against 25 persons, and Judge Horace Stern signed bench warrants for arrest of nine more.

Doumergue Cabinet Upheld by Herriot

CLERMONT-FERRAND, France, May 12.—(AP.)—Edouard Herriot led a battle for the Doumergue cabinet in the Radical-Socialist party congress today.

The former premier, now one of Gaston Doumergue's ministers without portfolio, planned to climb the rostrum to make a final plea for a vote of confidence in the truce government.

Preakness Draws 35,000 Cavalcade Favorite

By HARVEY RIVKIN
International News Service.

PIMLICO, Md., May 12.—Preakness Day. Weather ideal, track fast.

Eight 3-year-olds munching oats contentedly in their stalls, surrounded by their bodyguards.

Thirty-five thousand people, a cosmopolitan crowd, who came by train, by plane, steamboat and automobile, to see the forty-fourth running of the Preakness, Maryland's racing classic.

Today's distance is a mile and three-sixteenths and as many as old hilltop can pack in, including official Washington and more or less unofficial United States and Canada, will be there to shout: "Come on Cavalcade," "Come on Discovery," Come on Spy Hill."

Cavalcade, Brookmeade Stable entry, Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's stellar 3-year-old, the favorite, with probable odds of 3-5 or 8-10, is ready to seek his second triumph in two weeks. He won the Kentucky Derby last Saturday and now longingly looking at the Woodlawn vase and the $25,000 added.

If Cavalcade scores today he joins a trio of famous horses who won the Derby and Preakness all in one year. Cavalcade will gain a spot in horsedom's hall of fame with Sir Barton, Gallant Fox and Burgoo King.

Anarchy, which was coupled with Cavalcade and High Quest as the Brookmeade entry, was scratched this morning.

Rain, Warmer to Follow Untimely Cold Snap

With the thermometer registering as low as 39 degrees today, Pittsburgh shivered in a sub-normal May temperature, but forecasts were for a slow rise over the week-end.

Forecaster W. S. Brotzman predicted showers and warmer for tomorrow.

Meanwhile, the city appeared to have escaped any after-effects of the dust storm that passed over Pittsburgh Thursday evening and early Friday.

The dust cloud was little noticeable here because it passed at such a high altitude.

H. B. Meller, superintendent of the Bureau of Smoke Regulation, said the dust measured only 3½ tons per cubic mile at ground surface, which is about normal.

In New York the dust measured 40 tons per cubic mile when the gigantic cloud estimated to be 1,500 miles long and 900 miles wide swept over that area.

M'NAIR PASSES BUCK FOR SMITH OUSTER TO CRITICS IN COUNCIL

BLAMES KANE'S RAP AT POLICE IN MOVE

Safety Head to Receive Written Dismissal If Bell Wins Job

A written order dismissing Safety Director Ralph E. Smith will be handed to Council Monday if and after it votes to confirm Archibald Marshall Bell for the head of the Safety Department, according to Mayor McNair.

If the dismissal is made, the reason given in writing by the Mayor will be the wording of the Police Commission ordinance approved by Council and sponsored by John J. Kane, Democratic councilman.

The wording of that ordinance, particularly the section which states that the Bureau of Police appears to be functioning unsatisfactorily, is considered by the Mayor as a reflection on his administration.

MATTER OF DOUBT

Whether Council will confirm Bell, the gentleman farmer, as safety head is a matter of serious doubt. Some of the Republican councilmen, who are inclined to favor him, have said they will not vote for him unless the Mayor first creates a vacancy by dismissing Smith.

The Mayor first said he would not dismiss Smith, and that it was up to Council. Then some of his advisers favorable to the Bell candidacy had a talk with him, and he agreed to compromise by writing out the dismissal order and having Theodore L. Moritz, his secretary, hand it in after a favorable vote on Bell.

There is a chance that some of the Councilmen who have frowned on the Mayor's Traction Conference Board tactics as "frivolous," may see something akin to that in the new strategy.

DEMOCRATS FOR SMITH

The four Democrats are almost certain to attempt to hold Director Smith in his job.

Just how deeply the Mayor was cut by the somewhat dashing clauses in the Kane police commission ordinance he reveals in this fashion:

"I consider it a direct slap at me. Council by a unanimous vote passed an ordinance making all those charges against the Police Bureau. What else can be done but make a change? I told some of the councilmen at the time that unless they withdrew the ordinance I would have to remove Smith."

DOESN'T WANT JOB

McNair also stated that he did not want to take over the Safety Department personally and that there is no use in dismissing Smith unless his successor has been appointed.

Some of the clauses to which the Mayor particularly objected in the Kane ordinance were that the police have countenanced the operation of unlawful enterprises existing through an unholy partnership with politicians, and have suppressed lawful assemblages.

M'FALL LINKS COYNE WITH SHANNON

Schnader Head Urges Fee Office Abolition, Scores Mackrell

A proposal for abolition of the delinquent tax office and the fee system for the Register of Wills' office has been made by William B. McFall, chairman of the local governorship campaign committee of William A. Schnader.

The McFall statement, in which Senator James J. Coyne is linked with forces supporting Edward C. Shannon for Governor, came as a counter blast to an attack of Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell on Schnader. Mackrell charged McFall with being a screen for Coyne.

Stating he was supporting Schnader because of his qualifications and that Coyne was not an issue, McFall struck out:

"In East Pittsburgh Schnader declared that public servants should be paid what they are worth—that there is no reason for any county official to receive fees of from $25,000 to $100,000 a year.

"Let us remember that for many years Mr. Mackrell has held a big fee office which came to him from Republican organization politics. Let us remember that the head of the Shannon campaign is County Treasurer Robert Cain, one of Mr. Coyne's friends. Mr. Cain appointed the present delinquent tax collector, who receives 5 per cent of all county delinquent taxes paid.

"Mr. Coyne's defense of that office for Mr. Cain in the last Legislature aroused public indignation."

COUNTRY NEEDS TO 'SOBER UP,' REED SAYS

Pinchot Assails Rival As One No Longer 'Fashionable'

HARRISBURG, May 12.—(AP.)—Senator David A. Reed's attack on administration policies is the crux of his fight with Gov. Gifford Pinchot as they near the end of their battle for the Republican senatorial nomination.

"If by liberal applications of cold water I can assist the country toward sobriety I shall continue to throw it by the bucketfull."

This was one of Reed's declarations in an address at Scranton last night.

He expressed the conviction that all the country needs to do is "to quit taking these stimulants, to get out of the overheated and stifling attitude of the New Deal, to get back to plain living and sober up."

Reed said he credits President Roosevelt with patriotic motives in introducing the policies of the New Deal, but added:

"I regret that I cannot recognize the same patriotic purpose in certain others who surround him."

PINCHOT CALLS REED 'CAT'

In nearby Wilkes-Barre, Gov. Pinchot was describing Senator Reed's influence in Washington as negligible. The Governor asserted:

"His breed of cat has gone out of fashion in Congress. They have been throwing them out by the wholesale."

Pinchot also assailed the Democratic leadership in Pennsylvania as not representative of President Roosevelt's ideals, but added that he favors "driving the crooks and rascals out of my own party first."

BLAMES 'PROFESSORS'

Blaming "the professors, the doctrinaries and the theorists who are supplying the idea for the New Deal," Reed said, "They have fed the country first one stimulant and then another until it is staggering under more kinds of bad medicine than any country possibly could absorb."

He offered his plan to "sober up" as the alternative "for the spree which has been in progress for the past year."

Overcoat Goes To Europe; We Have the Buttons

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

When it comes to collecting debts Europe is determined that the U. S. doesn't lose its amateur standing.

They hate to see us turn professional. One of the old world statesmen called poor old Uncle Sam a highway robber. That's lowing your neighbor.

So far we have collected nothing but tokens. A token is a pledge of good faith. A reminder of something you forgot. They have been used by banks, corporations and nations.

We have plenty of those. But we cannot see how Europe calls America a pawn broker when Europe has the overcoat and all we have are the buttons.

That's what a token is. It is a button.

SILVER ISSUE AGREEMENT NEAR

Senate Bloc Awaits Roosevelt Ruling On Money Base

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The highly controversial issue of silver legislation was returned to the White House today for a decision by President Roosevelt on the language to be used in a bill restoring silver as primary American money.

The President and the Senate silver block were reported in agreement on the principle to be incorporated in the legislation. This was a policy of using both gold and silver as the money base, with silver ultimately to become 25 per cent of the total monetary reserves. The one question unsettled was the choice of language to write this principle into law.

The Senate leaders were willing to rely upon the President's explicit promise to adopt a declaration of policy for the restoration of silver as primary money. They believed he would agree finally with them on language, which would put this policy into effect.

One Senate leader said:

"We are not far apart right now. The President has been proposing permissive legislation; we have been demanding mandatory legislation. Our conferences have revealed we are talking about virtually the same thing, though calling it by different names. I expect a prompt agreement when we get together next week."

It developed the President, in urging permissive legislation, was opposed to a bill compelling the Treasury to purchase a fixed quantity of silver monthly until some huge maximum was reached or commodity prices restored to the 1926 levels. This was the silver bloc's former plan for remonetizing silver.

The silver leaders also beat down the opposition of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. At their first conference with him he proposed a program, which lacked any declaration of governmental policy and blocked any expansion of the currency through the use of silver certificates. At their final conference, the Secretary interposed no objection to expanding the currency and agreed upon the declaration of policy.

The question of nationalizing silver was left in the air. Some silver bloc leaders opposed it, on the ground it would give London control of world silver prices, since under nationalization, no market could be maintained in New York. Others desired it, in order to prevent silver speculation in this country. The President probably will decide this question.

U. S. WAITS DEBT MOVE ABROAD

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt definitely assumed the position today that the next move in the who's-in-default game is up to the European debtor nations.

Through diplomatic channels the President has informed Great Britain, France, Italy, Belgium and Czecho-Slovakia that the United States is willing to at least discuss any individual suggestions for payments on or readjustment of their debts.

The debtor nations have learned from their envoys here, however, that the President is adamant against any general conclave of nations for wholesale revision of debts.

They have been informed also that the President cannot again definitely assure token payers that they are not in default under the terms of the Johnson act.

LEAGUE FOES HAVE ONE DAY

Only one day more remains for residents of this district to oppose the attempts of propagandists to force the United States into the League of Nations and World Court. The thousands of signatures obtained here up to date have been shipped to Washington, where they will be presented Wednesday to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Approximately 50,000 patriotic and loyal Americans already have entered their protest by signing the petitions being circulated by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and associated Hearst newspapers. The total for the entire country is well over 1,500,000.

There appears in today's paper a blank petition which you can still sign. Petitions must be in the office of the Sun-Telegraph by Monday noon so that they can be shipped immediately to Washington for the hearing. If you have not already signed the petition, do so at once. Have your friends and neighbors also make known their protest and return the petition to the Sun-Telegraph at once.

SAMPLE BALLOT COST ATTACKED

Twelve thousand dollars every election would be saved the county by eliminating the distribution of large numbers of specimen ballots to candidates, according to John M. Henry, director of the election bureau.

Henry today recommended the election laws be amended at the next session of the Legislature to make this saving.

He pointed out that the printing of 20 tons of sample ballots for next week's primary election and their distribution were costing the taxpayers about $12,000. He said:

"I suggest the law be changed so that we could mail single copies of sample ballots to the candidates and let them have others printed at their own expense."

Bell's Apples Won Him McNair Appointment

Had Eye on Orchard In Naming Director, Mayor Reveals

Apples—that's the reason Mayor McNair appointed Archibald Marshall Bell Public Safety Director.

The Mayor made the revelation last night in a campaign speech at Sullivan Field, Liberty avenue and Thirty-sixth street. He said:

"I made this new man Safety Director because he has a big apple orchard. Now I can be sure of my supply every day."

A bit of heckling on McNair's apple munching propensities preceded his explanation. In fact the boisterous crowd of some 300 Strip dwellers, half of them children, greeted the city's chief executive in a jeering mood.

FEEBLE RED FLARES

But the Mayor, who is a candidate for Governor, had them with him before he finished. Mounted on a truck amid some feeble red flares, he announced:

"The trouble is the people don't take me serious.

"I believe if elected I can help put through some laws which will give more jobs. I can't do it here because of that confounded Council. Councilman (William A.) Magee sits back like an elder statesman and says it's a lot of baloney."

PROMISES NO JOBS

McNair asserted he was spending no money, buying no votes, and promising no jobs. He said:

"If a fellow puts up the money, he's your boss. You can't serve the people."

McNair declared federal officeholders and employes of County Chairman David L. Lawrence were being whipped into line to vote against him. Reiterating there was no coercion in his administration, he said:

"You ought to vote the way you damn please."

And he ended with the plea:

"If you think you won't wake up dead in the morning, why vote for me."

Theodore L. Moritz, the Mayor's secretary and Congressional candidate in the Thirty-second District, praised McNair's administration.

TOM O'MALLEY CASE DELAYED

The trial of Thomas O'Malley, judge of the Second District, Second Ward, election board, and four other officials of the board, before Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker, charged with conspiring to violate the election law at the general election in November, 1932, will go to the jury Monday morning.

After closing addresses late yesterday by government and defense counsel, the court recessed over the week-end. The other defendants are John Barosky and Earl Longo, inspectors, and Floyd Kawka and Stanley Carlowski, clerks.

AIR MAIL ROUTE RESUMED HERE

Air mail service through Pittsburgh will be resumed tomorrow when a new air route between New York and Los Angeles will be placed in operation. The first airplane in the coast-to-coast service will be a westbound plane, which will arrive at the County Airport at 1:05 p. m. tomorrow. The mail will arrive at the Pittsburgh postoffice at 2 p. m. Another plane will leave New York the same day at 9:15 p. m. and arrive here at 12:50 a. m.

The first eastbound plane will arrive at the airport at 7:45 a. m., Monday, and reach New York at 1:30 p. m. A second eastbound plane will arrive at 4:50 p. m. and reach New York at 10:30 p. m. This will be the daily schedule, according to an announcement made at the Pittsburgh postoffice.

Since the discontinuation of airplanes by Army fliers no air mail planes have passed through this city.

RWD PAYROLL TO ADD 6,000

Six thousand more men are to be returned to work on projects of the Relief Works Division by next Wednesday, RWD headquarter announced today.

With the 6,000 ordered back to work yesterday 12,000 of the 16,000 laid off April 27 will be back on their jobs.

The funds for placing the men back at work come from the $837,000 allotment from the state emergency relief board for the month of May.

About 200 projects will be resumed by the 12,000 men, most of which will be on city sewers, water lines, streets, county highways and work in the North and South Parks.

Resumption of work on eight additional county RWD projects, employing 500 men, will start immediately, according to E. L. Schmidt, chief of the County Planning Commission.

4 EX-BANKERS RE-INDICTED

Four Johnstown bankers were re-indicted today by the federal grand jury for misallocation of funds, false entries and false reports to the Comptroller of the Currency.

All four are former officers of the First National Bank of Johnstown, Pa.

They are David Barry, president and director; Jacob M. Murdock, vice president and director; Harry Swank, vice president and director, and Patrick F. McAmeny, cashier and director.

The indictment contained 30 counts charging misallocation of bank funds of approximately $200,000 and four counts charging false entries and making false reports to the Comptroller of the Currency. The offenses are alleged to have occurred between May 26, 1931, and January 7, 1933.

The same men were indicted November 20, 1933, charged with misallocation of funds totaling $105,000.

LABOR FOR NRA 'CLEANUP'

PHILADELPHIA, May 12.—(AP.)—The Pennsylvania Federation of Labor seeks "a thorough housecleaning of the NRA and labor board staffs."

It passed a resolution at its closing convention session yesterday calling on President Roosevelt "to inaugurate immediately a thorough housecleaning from top to bottom of every official who considers the rights of labor to be of less importance than the many privileges given to private business."

The Recovery Act's protection of labor "has been neglected willfully or grossly in coal, steel, textiles and other industries," the resolution said.

The federation also went on record in favor of industrial, or "vertical," unions. Similar to the medieval guilds in that workers in all phases of an industry are classed together rather than being divided into "horizontal" groupings as now, the "vertical" unions have heretofore not met with favor in the American Federation of Labor.

Weather Conditions

The large high, yesterday over the plains, is now central over the lake region (Detroit 30.52), and overlies most of the country east of the Mississippi River, with fair, cool weather in this district and frosts in the lake region. West Virginia and Western Pennsylvania. A trough of low pressure extends from Manitoba to Arizona, and light showers have attended its eastward development in the Upper Mississippi Valley, portions of the plains, the Rocky Mountains, and the Canadian Northwest. Another high appears in the Canadian Northwest (Calgary, Alberta, 30.28), and weather is cool and mostly clear over the Canadian Northwest this morning. It is warmer over the plains states and the rains have been too light to be very beneficial so far.

River Conditions

The rivers are about stationary. Stage at Franklin is 1.2 feet; Lock No. 7 (Mon.), 11.2; Pittsburgh, 10.5; Dam No. 4, 9.3; No. 6, 7.5; No. 10, 8.8, and No. 12, 7.5. The dams are up.

METER TAX SUIT REPLY DUE

Six Pittsburgh public utility companies, seeking to restrain the city from collecting the $2 meter tax, have until Tuesday to file briefs in Common Pleas Court.

Judge Elder W. Marshall heard arguments on their petition for a restraining order yesterday and said the court intends to dispose of the case promptly, after the briefs are filed.

The utilities claim that meters, because they are part of the operating properties of the companies, are exempt by law from taxation.

The city contends it has the right to tax the meters under the act passed in 1932 to levy such taxes in cases of emergency.

Milk Committee Seeks Law Violators

The Milk Marketing Committee of the Western Pennsylvania marketing area yesterday asked for confidential information on violations of the new state milk law. The information will be used in prosecutions to be brought against distributors and dealers who refuse to comply with the new law, according to R. L. Steele, committee secretary.

APPEAL FILED BY TOM COYNE

Continuing his fight to avoid going to jail, Thomas Coyne, one of the "Three Toms" convicted in the Monaca Club gambling case, has filed an appeal in Superior Court.

Coyne, brother of State Senator James J. Coyne, had been denied a new trial by Judge Thomas M. Marshall, who sentenced him to six months in jail along with Tom Dolan and Tom Goslin. They are now serving their terms.

Hundreds to Fete Police Superintendent

Several hundred persons are expected to attend a banquet in honor of Police Superintendent Ben R. Marshall in Hotel William Penn tonight. The dinner will mark his completion of 25 years' service on the Pittsburgh Police Bureau. District Attorney Andrew T. Park will be toastmaster.

Speakers will include former Gov. John S. Fisher, a boyhood friend of the police head; Mayor William N. McNair, Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, Walter Rosenbaum, Judge Elder W. Marshall, Council President Robert Garland, Frank R. Phillips, I. Lamont Hughes, Dr. Harry M. Goehring, Rev. Lucien Ducie, C. P., and Rabbi Joseph Shapiro.

Margiotti Radio Speech Cutting Off Scored

The cutting off of the opening remarks of Charles J. Margiotti, gubernatorial candidate, on the air last night calls for a "thorough investigation," James H. Duff, campaign manager, said today.

Scheduled to speak over KDKA and WLBW at 7:45 o'clock last night, by transmission from Philadelphia, Margiotti's voice did not come through the loud speakers until at least two minutes after the set time, his headquarters reported.

The voice, when it came, was rageless majority of radio listeners. They heard a vigorous and unidentified attack on William A. Schnader, who was pictured as a montebank operating a shell-game at a circus.

Although time had been checked at the beginning of the broadcast, the radio control man did not cut off the other program in time for the Margiotti introduction, was the studio explanation to headquarters.

Margiotti will make his first public appearance of the campaign here in a mass meeting in North Side Carnegie Hall tonight.

State Senator Frank J. Harris is prominent on the speakers' program, which includes James F. Malone, L. T. Stevenson, former president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards; George Proesel, past state commander of the American Legion; W. B. Secrist, Mrs. Robert K. Cochrane, Attorney Bessie K. Sacks and James H. Duff.

With closed state banks and the state's duty to depositors as his subject, Margiotti was to appear at noon at Butler, progressing to Zelienople, Beaver Falls, Rochester, Monaca, Aliquippa and speaking at 5 p. m. at Ambridge.

Tomorrow Margiotti will address a Ukrainian mass meeting in Ukrainian Hall, McKees Rocks.

This may cause England to revise her theory that "it is impossible to protect a city from airplane attack."

The French are interested, as you may imagine. One French book, "Hitler Over Europe," predicts a German fighting air fleet of 20,000 airplanes within a year, four times the fleet of France.

Our comic opera air force, divided into little units with no general command, would hardly be important enough to look on in the war that seems to be coming.

McLeod Sees Industry Boom in Bank Payoff

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 12.—A vast expansion of industrial re-employment would follow enactment of the McLeod bill to pay off in full the deposits of closed national banks, Representative McLeod (Rep.), of Michigan, said in a radio speech here.

Taking his battle for passage of his measure into one of the cities suffering most from bank failures, McLeod termed the bill "a relief measure of the highest kind."

Before his radio address the Representative spoke to a mass meeting attended by thousands to whom he was introduced by Representative Bacharach (Rep.), of New Jersey.

McLeod criticized congressional leaders for refusing to allow a vote on his bank relief bill.

He added:

"This is a non-partisan relief measure which has the support of outstanding members of both political parties. A companion bill has been introduced in the Senate by a member of the Democratic party.

"If voters make it plain to their duly elected representatives that they wish this measure to pass, it will pass. The time has come for Congress to make a new declaration of independence."

COREY, FORMER U. S. STEEL HEAD, ONCE COAL MINER, DIES

PITTSBURGHER ROSE TO RICHES RAPIDLY

Marriage to Stage Star In 1907 Stirred Two Continents

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP.)—William E. Corey, who rose from the Pennsylvania coal mines to become president of the United States Steel Corporation and whose romance with a musical comedy star stirred two continents at the turn of the century, died last night at his home in Fifth avenue. He was 68.

Corey, who married the former Mabelle Gillman in 1907 after a romantic courtship, had lived in virtual retirement for the last five years.

He was stricken ill about two months ago and died of pneumonia.

At his bedside were a son, A. L. Corey, and a brother, Alfred A. Corey, Jr. His marriage to Miss Gilman, who was his second wife, was dissolved by a Paris divorce in 1923.

Capitalist and industrialist, Corey's second marriage had fused two colorful careers which had their inception in humble beginnings.

COLORFUL CAREERS

Both began at the bottom and worked their way to the top of their respective fields, Corey rising from coal miner to president of U. S. Steel and Miss Gilman climbing from chorus girl to one of the most successful actresses of her generation.

Born at Braddock, Pa., Corey was educated in the public schools and Duff's College, Pittsburgh. He entered the chemical laboratory of the Edgar Thomson Steel Works at the age of 16.

Before his spectacular rise in the steel industry began, he married Laura Cook, who was more interested in her children and in aiding her husband to move ahead than in a career for herself.

RAPID RISE

Within two years after joining the Homestead Steel Works he became superintendent of the Homestead's plate mill. He became superintendent of the armor plate department in 1893, and 1897 succeeded Charles M. Schwab as general superintendent.

In 1901 he became President of the Carnegie Steel Company, a position he held until 1903, when he was made president of United States Steel. From 1915 until 1923 he was president and chairman of the board of the Midvale Steel and Ordnance Company.

While he was mastering steel, Miss Gilman was captivating New York musical show audiences. They first met at an after-theater party one night in 1903 in Pittsburgh—he at the height of power, she the star of "The Mockingbird."

MARRIES ACTRESS

Two years later his first marriage ended in divorce, with Corey settling $1,000,000 on his wife and making generous provision for their children. Then he sent Miss Gilman to Europe to study for grand opera, and announced their engagement.

On May 14, 1907, Miss Gilman and he were married in a New York hotel. They left at once for France, where Corey bought the Crateur Villegenisse, which his bride during the war turned over to the French government for a hospital, where she served as a nurse.

Although his marital affairs had aroused some opposition among his business associates, his ability as a steel man kept him in the presidency of United States Steel until 1911, when he resigned.

After that Corney divided his time between France and America, while his wife remained abroad. In 1923, 16 years after their marriage, the romance ended in the Paris divorce courts.

And She's Prosecuting Him!

MR. AND MRS. R. C. (DANNY) DOWLING . . . . . HE'S A BRIDEGROOM, NOT A KIDNAPER

The happily-married Dowlings—he's the Hollywood dancer, she's Actress-Flier Marjorie Crawford Wellman—as they announced that they had been married. Thus they created great furore in the court where Danny was on trial on Mrs. Danny's charge that he had kidnaped her and tried to force her to marry him. INSULL, FREED ON BAIL, RESTS IN HOSPITAL

'Good Luck,' He Calls To Fellow Prisoners; Out Under $250,000

CHICAGO, May 12.—(AP.)—Samuel Insull enjoyed a quarter million dollars' worth of liberty today—in a hospital.

The former head of a two billion dollar utility empire was in seclusion at St. Luke's Hospital for a few days' rest and medical attention after having won his release from the Cook County Jail, where he mooched cigars and had 13-year-old George Rogalski, an alleged kidnaper, for his nearest neighbor.

"Well, boys, good luck to you all."

Thus he called jovially to his fellow prisoners as he left the jail hospital yesterday when his friends put up $250,000 to insure his presence in Federal Court on charges of using the mail to defraud and violation of the bankruptcy law, and in the State Criminal Court, where embezzlement is alleged.

Of the $250,000 bond, $200,000 of it was on the federal charges—the highest amount ever asked of a prisoner in Chicago—while the remaining $50,000 was on the state's charge.

It took almost the entire day to wind up the court activities, which began with a defiance by the defendant of the jurisdiction of the Federal Court. He refused to plead guilty or not guilty and planned to contest the legality of his arrest again next Tuesday, when his lawyer will argue he was not extradited, but was "shanghaied" from Turkey.

The federal bond having been supplied, the former financier gained his release on the state charge and went immediately in a taxicab to the hospital.

MILLEN ESCAPE FOILED BY TROOPERS

Tries to Shoot Way Out As Brother Cheers From Cell

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

DEDHAM, Mass., May 12.—Irving Millen, on trial for murder with his brother Murton and Abe Faber, tried a Dillinger, but it didn't work.

At attempt to shoot his way out of Dedham Jail last night was frustrated by the alertness of two state troopers, and today Irving was in solitary confinement nursing bruises received in the battle which subdued him.

Meanwhile, authorities hunted an automobile seen lurking in the shadows of the elm trees outside the prison at the time of the attempted jail break.

TRIES TO GRAB GUN

The machine shot away into the night shortly after Irving tried to seize a trooper's gun and was overcome.

The three yountns had returned from the Courthouse where they are being tried for murder in connection with the holdup of the Needham Trust Company in which two policemen were killed by machine gun bullets.

They had eaten their supper. It has been customary to permit them to exercise by walking up and down the corridor of "the pit." The prisoners had been instructed not to walk within six feet of the two troopers on guard in the pit.

Irving, who is 21, was the first to be taken from his cell for a "stretch-me-out."

At the end of the pit was Trooper Theodore Fitzgerald. At the other end was Trooper John Brown.

Brown was on duty near the foot of the stairs leading from the pit to the rotunda—and the path to freedom. As Irving walked up and down, he drew closer each time he turned at Brown's post.

LUNGES AT GUARD

Suddenly he lunged at Trooper Brown and swung a quick right-handed punch.

Irving grabbed at the trooper's holster containing his revolver. The spring flap on the holster spun open. Irving got his hand on the butt of the gun.

By this time, Trooper Fitzgerald had rushed down from the other end of the pit. He held his gun in his hand, but was afraid to fire for fear of hitting his brother officer.

Brown and Irving rolled on the floor. Trooper Fitzgerald, holding his gun as a club, tried to slug Irving as his head came into view.

The cells of the Millen brothers and Faber are on an even line with the floor of the pit.

Murton shouted encouragement from his locked cell.

But Brown was now on top.

He slugged Irving in the jaw and banged his head on the floor.

2-CRASH FLIER GETS 30 DAYS

Steve Petrovich, who likes to fly high, can practice up on the "Prisoner's Song" for the next 30 days but he can't even ride in an airplane.

Steve, 33, of 150 Brahm street, whose trade as a roofer usually keeps him off the ground, pleaded guilty yesterday before Squire James A. Hernon, of Sharpsburg, to piloting a borrowed plane without a license, and drew a 30-day jail term. He had the alternative of paying $100 fine. Asked if he could raise it, Petrovich replied:

"Honestly, Squire, I don't believe I have a friend in the world who would lay out $100 for me."

Sergt. F. L. Garmow, of the state highway patrol, appeared as a witness against Petrovich and told of the latter's fine exhibition of eccentric flying.

Petrovich, piloting the plane of William Boyd, 3751 Baytree street, crashed twice on Spring Hill Wednesday night.

WOMAN TRAPS 2 AS THIEVES

Two Cleveland men were under arrest in Mt. Lebanon today after a woman telephoned police they were trying to break in an apartment across the hall late yesterday.

Mrs. Robert Bassett, of the Berkshire Apartments, 26 Academy avenue, heard the pair and, picking up her telephone, whispered a warning to police.

The two were docketed as Abe Pinberg, 23, and Reuben Green, 23, both of Cleveland. City detectives later questioned them as suspects in several robberies in this district.

Recover Body of Ambridge Man

AMBRIDGE, Pa., May 12.—The body of Charles Fields, 53, a plumber, who leaped one week ago from the Ambridge-Aliquippa bridge, after inquiring of passersby if the water was cold, was recovered near the Legionville dam, yesterday.

Two East End Men Hurt in Auto Crash

Clifford Hartford, 45, of 334 South Highland avenue, and Joseph McHugh, 32, of 321 North St. Clair street, were injured last night when their automobile struck a pole at Bigelow boulevard and Bloomfield Bridge.

Picture of King Honoring Athlete Surprises Kin

A picture in yesterday's Sun-Telegraph showing King George, of England, presenting a championship cup to Capt. Cowan, of the Manchester City soccer club, may not have interested many here, but there was one reader who was really interested—and surprised. She was Mrs. John P. Kelly, of 99 South Grandview avenue, Crafton, his sister, who recalled that a year ago the brother, who had failed to be on the winning side, had remarked to the King:

"I'll see you again next year, Your Majesty."

And the King had answered:

"I hope so."

Cowan was in the United States six years ago and visited his sister, who has been a resident of Pittsburgh 14 years.

Deaths of Mothers Held Preventable

Fully 60 per cent of mothers' deaths incidental to child-birth are preventable and could be eliminated with proper maternity care, according to a Mother's Day statement issued by Helen V. Stevens, director of the Public Health Nursing Association. She revealed that in Pittsburgh alone there were last year 50 deaths out of 1,250 cases of child delivery.

SEEK ROBBERS IN BRIDE KILLING

PHILADELPHIA, May 12.—(AP.)-Police discarding their original theory, say they believe robbery was the motive for the "trunk slaying of Mrs. Mary Hoge, 32, bride of nine months.

They are continuing their search for Joseph Hoge, 22, the dead woman's stepson. His father, Jacob, 48, says he saw Joseph seated on the trunk shortly before the woman's battered, stabbed body was found inside it.

Detectives shifted to the robbery theory after members of the family denied the stepson, who disappeared from the West Philadelphia home late yesterday, had "kept company" with the slain woman before she married his father, Jacob, 48. The father said his wife's money was missing.

Rosa Ponselle to Be Dinner Guest

The Pittsburgh Symphony Society today announced that Rosa Ponselle, world famous prima donna, will be guest of honor at a dinner Tuesday night, which formally opens the society's campaign for $100,000. Dr. Walter Damrosch will make the principal address. Miss Ponselle appears as soloist at the Pittsburgh Symphony concert in Syria Mosque Wednesday.

Five Given Divorce; Three Ask Decrees

Five divorce decrees have been granted and three new suits are on file today in Common Pleas Court.

The suits were filed by Dorsey C. Sterne against Eve P. Sterne, Addison Smith against Alga Smith and by Sarah J. Cummins against James M. Cummins.

The decrees were granted to Mary A. Bistry from Harry T. Bistry, Raymond Semmers from Eleanor Semmers, Carlo C. DiPonziano from Concetta A. DiPonziano, Ethel Phillips from George Thomas Phillips and to Selma Weitzner from Samuel T. Weitzner.

Swissvale Birdge Fired by Cigaret

Fire, said to have been caused by a lighted cigaret tossed from an automobile, disrupted traffic on the Swissvale-Rankin Bridge for a half hour last night as Swissvale firemen battled the flames.

Return Johnstown Man to New York

Frank Bezilla, 23, of Johnstown, was ordered removed to New York by Federal Judge Nelson McVicar to answer a charge of indorsing and passing a government check for $45.62, issued to his brother-in-law, Felipa Cruda, of Brooklyn.

SEA BEAST BID ENRAGES SCOTS

International News Service.

INVERNESS, Scotland, May 12.—"What! Sell the famous Loch Ness sea monster to America?"

The villagers who dwell along the shores of Loch Ness first blinked their eyes, then grew indignant when told that Director Dr. W. Reid Blair, of the Bronx Zoo, in New York, has offered $25,000 to any man who would capture the beast and transport it to the United States. One angry comment was:

"No more than we would sell His Majesty, King George, himself."

The Loch Ness monster, Americans may as well know now, is a distinctly home-born product—some people say of Scotch imagination—and if captured will never be allowed to leave British shores.

All sorts of royal scientific societies, all sorts of mass meetings would raise such a hullabaloo that no government that permitted the sale would survive more than 24 hours.

WOMAN HURT, RAID FOLLOWS

Mrs. Nina Vida, 62, of 530 Second avenue, who severed an artery when, police said, she thrust her right arm through the glass in the door of a confectionery at 532 Second avenue, after being ejected from the place late yesterday, was reported in serious condition in Mercy Hospital today.

In a raid that followed police reported arresting two men and a woman and seizing six pints of moonshine whisky in a rear room of the store. The prisoners, charged with violating the liquor laws, were docketed as Mrs. Theresa Vitch, 28, and Stanley Pobewa, 42, both of 532 Second avenue, and Andrew Popp, 54, of 520 Second avenue. Mrs. Vida was put out after becoming involved in an argument with Popp, police asserted.

When Mrs. Vida discovered the door of the store was locked against her, she thrust her arm through the glass in the door, according to police.

ALDERMAN DIES ON NORTH SIDE

Once a power in North Side politics, Alderman Samuel A. Abernathy, 80, died last night in his home, 24 West North Diamond street. He was serving his thirty-fourth year as alderman in the Twenty-second Ward.

Alderman Abernathy was born in the old Third Ward of Allegheny and conducted a hotel at First avenue and Ferry street nearly 10 years.

His entry in politics was marked by his election as constable in the old First Ward, Allegheny, a post he held until 1900, when he was elected alderman. During the administration of Mayor James Wyman in old Allegheny, Mr. Abernathy served as police magistrate. He was a Mason.

He leaves three grandsons, Leo, Samuel and Albert Abernathy, all of Pittsburgh.

Research Engineer Found Dead in Bed

ERIE, Pa., May 12.—(AP.)—Arthur F. Klein, a research engineer, and formerly of Johnstown, was found dead in bed yesterday, a victim of indigestion and a heart condition with which he had suffered for several years. He was 55.

Klein owned several blue ribbon horses and was a familiar figure on the bridal paths.

Policeman Injured In Auto Collision

Daniel Doyle, 44, a mounted policeman, was in St. Francis Hospital today with three broken ribs suffered in an automobile collision at Twenty-ninth street and Liberty avenue. Doyle lives at 3475 Denny street. W. J. Ley, 49, of 2730 Sacremento street, driver of the other auto, was uninjured.

Yale Editors Award Pittsburgher Prize

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 12.—(AP.)—George H. Hamilton, of Pittsburgh, has been awarded the annual Francis Bergen memorial prize by the editors of the Yale Literary Magazine, it was announced today when a list of awards for scholastic activities was made known.

ACTRESS GETS SHOOTING TERM

LOS ANGELES, May 12.—(AP.)—Beverly Granger, actress, unexpectedly pleaded guilty yesterday to charges of assault with a deadly weapon as a result of the wounding of Earl Courtois, salesman, in his apartment here. She was sentenced to 10 months in the county jail.

Courtois had been called as the first prosecution witness in Miss Granger's trial when the actress' counsel announced she would plead guilty.

The attorney asserted the shooting, in which Courtois was twice wounded, grew out of a quarrel following a drinking party.

Courtois, at the actress' preliminary hearing, said he did not wish to prosecute.

'Good Samaritan' Beaten, Robbed

Lured into Plush way, North Side, by two men he had befriended, Daniel Grotwald, 58, of 337 First avenue, was beaten and robbed of his watch and 69 cents, he told police.

His alleged assailants were arrested. They said they were George Black, 22, of 631 Reedsdale streeet, and Jack Bigham, of 600 East Diamond street.

CLEAR JAILER OF DILLINGER

CROWN POINT, Ind., May 12.—(AP.)—Ernest Blunk, one of the two men accused of aiding John Dillinger to escape from the Crown Point Jail, was acquitted yesterday.

Judge Maurice Crites, who heard the trial without a jury, decided the state's evidence was insufficient to support the charge that Blunk, fingerprint expert at the jail, wilfully and feloniously aided Dillinger to escape.

Sam Cahoon, a trusty who had the job of jail turnkey, was the man indicted jointly with Blunk. His trial date has not yet been set.

EX-WIFE SUES DAVE RUBINOFF

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Mrs. David Rubinoff, former wife of the orchestra leader, is suing her husband for one-third of his income since 1927, it was disclosed today. The suit was filed some time ago, but details were withheld.

The couple married in 1924 and parted three years later. Shortly afterward Mrs. Rubinoff obtained a divorce without alimony, but she claims her husband agreed to pay her a third of his income. Since 1927 his earnings have jumped from $20,000 a year to $260,000, she says.

ORDER CALVIT INQUIRY

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Justice John F. Carew today ruled that Mrs. Dorothy Russell Calvit, daughter of the late Lillian Russell, must undergo examination before trial in her suit against Mrs. Dorothy Caruso Ingram Holder, widow of Enrico Caruso, for possession of a diamond and emerald ring.

Mrs. Calvit claims the ring, now in the possession of Mrs. Holder, as her gift from her mother. She says she entrusted it to her step-father, the late Alexander P. Moore, former ambassador to Spain, for safe-keeping. Mrs. Holder says Mr. Moore gave the ring to her.

Night Club Lap-Sitting Banned as Menace

PORTLAND, Ore., May 12.—(AP.)—Night club girls no longer will be permitted to sit in the laps of tired businessmen in Portland's night clubs and beer halls.

The city's "lap-sitting and contact" ordinance, assertedly designed to forestall "a decadence in social and moral behavior" in Portland, became effective today when signed by Mayor Joseph K. Carson, Jr.

City Commissioner R. E. Bean, who proposed the statute, said:

"This ordinance is necessary for the immediate preservation of public health, peace and safety of the city, and it will prevent a decadence in social and moral behavior."

The purpose of the law is to keep the girl entertainers where the city fathers believe they belong—on the stage or in a cleared area unobstructed by patrons. Floor shows are definitely "out" at beer places and clubs unless 500 square feet of space is designated for entertainers and no one else. The smallest dimension of this area must be 15 feet.

Parents Drop Support Suit, Film Star Wins

LOS ANGELES, May 12.—(AP.)—Mary Astor, screen actress, is the victor in the suit of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Langhanke, charging her with failure to support them. Judge H. Parker Wood ruled in her favor yesterday after her parents failed to appear in court.

Miss Astor testified her father was able to support himself. She said she paid for the $200,000 home her parents occupied, and which was sold recently at public auction to satisfy a mortgage.

The Langhankes had indicated they would not press their court action, since Mrs. Langhanke had received a small legacy from a relative.

The Langhankes had asserted in their complaint they were practically penniless and faced starvation unless their daughter was forced to come to their aid.

Langhanke asserted he gave up his musical career several years ago to sponsor the career of Miss Astor.

The actress, in her answer to the suit, said she could not afford to pay off the $15,000 mortgage on their mansion or keep them in the style they apparently desired. She said her parents obtained the major part of all her earnings for several years.

CHURCHES PLAN TRIBUTES FOR PITTSBURGH MOTHERS

SPECIAL RITES ARRANGED FOR TOMORROW

"Mother" tomorrow will find herself lifted from her place of quiet, everyday service to a position of loving glory, for she will not only be remembered by her children with special little gifts and messages, but also will be the subject of sermons the country over.

Pittsburgh churches will do their share in paying her their respects with services of song and pageant. In Emory Methodist Episcopal Church, North Highland avenue, the Rev. M. B. Fuller, pastor, will speak on "The Romance of Parenthood" at the 8 p. m. service to which many of the older mothers are to be brought in autos.

JUDGE TO SPEAK

Epiphany Church will hold a solemn celebration with the combined junior and senior choirs presenting special music. Judge James H. Gray will make the address in the Seventh Presbyterian Church, Forty-fourth street, at a morning service held annually by the ladies' Bible class.

Two special Salvation Army services will take place in the evening. The one will be at the Army Hall, East Main street, Carnegie, and the other in headquarters, Boulevard of the Allies. Hundreds of men of all ages will gather about the same time in the auditorium of the Association for the Improvement of the Poor, Duquesne way, to pay tribute to "Mother" and sing the hymns of their childhood.

PAGEANT IN HOMESTEAD

Included in the special pageants and cantatas planned for the day is "When Mothers Meet" to be given at the Greenfield Presbyterian Church, Colman street, Squirrel Hill. Not so far distant all the mothers of the vicinity will be guests at the pageant prepared by the Christian Youth Association of the Homestead district.

In the North Side district 25 members of the Volunteers of America will enact a cantata, "Behold Thy Mother" in the Volunteer Building, East Diamond street. Their program will close with the singing of a special mother song dedicated to all the mothers.

Seminary Students To Present Play

The drama, "St. Francis of Assisi," will be presented by students of St. Fidelis Seminary at Herman, Pa., in St. Augustine's Parish Hall, Thirty-seventh street, tomorrow night and on Wednesday and Thursday nights. The play is for the benefit of St. Fidelis Seminary.

Evangelist

DR. OLIVER E. WILLIAMS

DR. WILLIAMS GIVING REVIVAL

Dr. Oliver E. Williams, Evangelist, will open a three weeks revival campaign in West Park, North Side at 7:30 p. m. tomorrow. Dr. Williams, who returned to Pittsburgh this week after a campaign in Evansville, Ind., is a member of the Radio Sky Pilots, which include Angie Williams, director of singing, Prof. J. R. MacMurray, instrumentalist and "musical sermon" evangelist, and the Rev. Maring L. Swart, pianist and assistant.

Services during the three weeks will be held in a large tent at the band stand.

XENIA SEMINARY TO GRADUATE CLASS OF 22

The coming week will be a busy one for members of the graduating class of the Pittsburgh-Xenia Theological Seminary. Tomorrow morning they will attend baccalaureate services in the Sixth United Presbyterian Church, East Liberty, at which Prof. Clarence J. Williamson will speak.

In the afternoon the Rev. Dr. Albert H. Baldinger will preside at the observance of communion in the seminary chapel, North avenue. Wednesday when the board of directors convene in the seminary at 2 p. m. the honorary preachers of the class, H. DaCosta Finley and Ralph M. Grove, will be heard.

Dr. W. J. Michael, of Greensburg, president of the board, will preside at the devotional hour in the evening and he will introduce the speakers, the Rev. James K. Leitch, the Rev. Robert A. Foster and Dr. William Murchie. Commencement exercises are to take place at 8 p. m. Thursday in the First United Presbyterian Church, Union avenue, following a meeting and annual banquet of the Alumni Association.

Twenty-two young men, seven of whom are sons of ministers, will be awarded the degree of bachelor of theology. Master of theology will be conferred on the Rev. Joseph B. Brown, of Zelienople, and the Rev. Arthur B. Whiting, of Pittsburgh. President John McNaugher will deliver the commencement address and present the diplomas.

LEE CENTENNIAL PARTY TO AID RITES HERE

Members of the Jason Lee centennial party which is en route from Boston to Salem, Ore. traversing the same route traveled by Jason Lee and Cyrus Shepherd, the first missionaries to Oregon 100 years ago, will be speakers in Methodist Episcopal churches throughout the Pittsburgh district tomorrow and Monday.

Bishop Titus Lowe, of the Portland area, will speak in the Butler Street Church, of which he is a former member, tomorrow morning. In the afternoon he will attend a special men's meeting at Christ Church, and in the evening will preach at the First Church in Braddock.

On the schedule for Dr. Mark A. Dawber, superintendent of rural work of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension, of Philadelphia, are a morning sermon at Aspinwall, a vesper service in the South Avenue Church, Wilkinsburg, and an evening service at Calvary Church.

Dr. Elbert M. Conover, director of the Bureau of Architecture of the same board will preach at the First Church of Beaver Falls in the morning and at the First Church of Rochester in the evening. A fourth member, Dr. Jay S. Stowell, director of publicity, plans to visit the First Methodist Church, McKeesport, and the Homewood Avenue Church.

Winter Moon, full blood Indian from Arizona, who is accompanying the party will also be a guest at the various churches. Tomorrow he will attend the church school of the Asbury M. E. Church, Forbes street, and Monday he will sing the songs of his tribe at a public meeting of the Smithfield Street M. E. Church at 10:30 a. m.

The Story of Jezebel

CHAPTER IV — TOLD IN PICTURES BY DAN SMITH

After three years of peace Ahab, king of Israel, and Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, made war upon the Syrians; and it came to pass that a certain man drew a bow and smote Ahab between the joints of his armor.

So Ahab died and was brought back to Samaria for burial. And where they washed his armor and his chariot in the pool of Samaria the dogs licked up his blood, even as the prophet Elijah had foretold.

Then after Elijah had gone up by a whirlwind into heaven and his spirit had fallen upon Elisha, it came to pass, when Elisha had gone up unto Bethel, that children came forth from the city and mocked him, and said, "Go up, thou bald head." And when Elisha looked back and cursed them in the name of the Lord, two she bears came forth out of the wood and tore forty and two of the children of Bethel.

BELLEVUE U. P. TO INDUCT SIX ELDERS

As part of the morning worship service, six elders are to be inducted into office at the Bellevue United Presbyterian Church, Lincoln avenue, tomorrow. Four of the men return to office by re-election of the congregation. They are H. L. Cleland, J. R. Sloane Dobaghy, Lincoln Forrester and Harry W. Pinkerton.

The two new elders to be installed are Harry Lees and Ralph Witherspoon.

In the evening the service will be held in the chapel, where a Mother's Day play will be presented. The play in which the young people of the church are to participate, is "The Great Reward."

SONG FESTIVAL FOR TRINITY

Dr. D. West Richards, of Youngstown, O., will be the music conductor when the Gymanfa Ganu Association of Pittsburgh holds its annual song festival in Trinity Cathedral, Sixth avenue, tomorrow.

At the 3 p. m. session a selected choir will sing "Worthy Is the Lamb" and at 8 p. m. they will offer "The Hallelujah Chorus." Welsh choral societies will take part in the festival.

In the afternoon, the Rev. W. Henry Williams, of the Carmel Presbyterian Church, will have charge of the devotional exercises and the Very Rev. N. R. H. Moor, dean of the Cathedral, will conduct the evening service.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

Ouster of Thorp Held Clever Work By Jim Farley

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The neatest, cleanest inside job of political guillotining in many a day was the one done on the innocent professor from New England, Dr. Thorp.

Not a finger-print was left anywhere to tell who lopped off the head of the director of foreign and domestic commerce.

Everyone knows the trigger man was Senator Stephens, of Mississippi, but he is strictly a trigger man. In his long career he has never been known to plan a job of such proportions as this one.

There was a master mind behind Stephens, but no one knows who, although some people have suspicions.

If the Senate of the United States should hold a secret vote today awarding a medal to the man who got Thorp, a majority probably would vote, rightly or wrongly, for none other than James A. Farley—yes, the Postmaster General.

CREDIT

Farley is so modest that he might decline the honor, but it is at least a compliment to him that Senators consider him capable of such a splendid execution.

It is especially complimentary because President Roosevelt himself, Commerce Secretary Roper and Assistant Commerce Secretary Dickinson originally tried to save Thorp.

INFLUENCE

Mr. Roosevelt nominated Thorp last January. Thorp was the kind of Republican that the Democrats have been welcoming into their fold, The Norris-La Follette type. He was a quiet economist who knew little of the Washington world.

His nomination was referred in the Senate to a sub-committee composed of two Democrats, Stephens and Bachman, and one Republican, Nye.

Hearings were held for two days. Rather trivial objections were made to Prof. Thorp. At any rate Bachman and Nye thought they were trivial.

Stephens, however, decided to fight. He fought with the only available weapon—delay. He declined to call his committee together and no action could be taken.

The President himself finally wrote a letter to Stephens demanding action. But it did no good. Roper likewise demanded action, but he had no more influence than the White House had.

SCUTTLING

After weeks, Stephens finally submitted the question in private to the larger commerce committee of the Senate, from which he derived his power.

No record exists to prove it, but in that secret commerce committee meeting, Stephens and Roper used some warm words. Stephens insinuated that Roper had first worked against Thorp. Roper's explanation was that he had later investigated the matter and found no valid objections to Thorp.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

LAWRENCE SHAW, National Director — J. JAMES MOORE, Pittsburgh Wing Commander

By J. JAMES MOORE,
Pittsburgh Wing Commander.

Greetings, members. Who is going to be the first boy or girl in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Wing to send in an application for a flight squadron? The first group of persons to send in the required 20 names of junior birdmen, you know, will become officially known as Flight Squadron No. 1.

I have received many letters from members stating that they were "certainly going to be the first in their neighborhood to have one of these units." Other members have stopped in to see me at the Sun-Telegraph telling me that they already had 15 or 18 names and that it would not be long until they had the necessary number to have a squadron.

The Flight Squadron Plan was inaugurated last Monday, but to date we have not any requests for a squadron charter. You still have a fine chance to be the first one. Get busy today and let's see who will be the first. I hope that I can announce by Tuesday that you were the first member to start such a unit.

It is easy to form a squadron. All you have to do is get 19 members in addition to yourself, send in their names, addresses, ages and membership numbers, enclose 25 cents for your charter, officers' bars and book of rules and regulations, and we will do the rest. There's nothing hard about it.

Junior Birdmen of America

The Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa.:

Please enroll me as a member of this new nation-wide junior organization for boys and girls. I pledge myself to become an active

(JUNIOR BIRDMAN)
(JUNIOR BIRDWOMAN)

I enclose a 10-cent coin to cover cost of Junior Birdmen wings and membership card including mailing and postage.

My Name .....
My Address .....
My Age .....
(Coin your dime carefully in a piece of paper and attach it to the coupon.)

Air Dictionary List No. 9

Automatic Propeller—A propeller with blades mounted so that the pitch may be changed while the propeller is rotating.

Aviation—The science and study of operating aircraft.

Aviation Fan—One who is interested in aviation, but not necessarily a pilot or flier.

Aviator—A person who operates a heavier-than-air craft, usually referring to a male. Same as pilot.

Aviatrix—A female who operates a heavier-than-air craft. Same as pilot.

Axial Cone—A cone-shaped fabric fitting in the end of a gas cell of a rigid airship, which permits a gas-tight connection of the cell to the gas cable. It gives the cell some degree of freedom in its movement without allowing gas to escape.

Axis (longitudinal)—An imaginery front to rear horizontal line about which the action of a plane in flight revolves.

Axis (vertical)—An imaginary vertical line about which the action of a plane in flight revolves. This line is from top to bottom of the plane. Also called normal axis.

Axis (lateral)—An imaginary horizontal line, running from side to side of the craft, about which the action of a plane in flight revolves.

Balance (equilibrium) — The tendency of the plane to return to its natural position when distributed by puffs of air and other forces while in flight.

Questions and Answers

John Kubli, Chalfant Borough—We have mailed all memberships requested before last Wednesday. I am sorry to hear that you have not received your pin and will see that you get it immediately.

Billy Dennis, Donora, Pa.—We hope to start our Writers' Club unit very shortly. Watch the daily Birdmen column for details.

Bruno Tobacchi, Cadiz, O.—It is impossible to become an Eagle member until three months after joining the Junior Birdmen, and then you must wait three months more before applying for an Ace membership. I'm glad to see that you are taking such an interest in our organization and hope that we can sign you up as the first Eagle member in our Pittsburgh wing.

Bob Artman, 310 Alries street—The loss of Birdmen wings is a situation that is impossible to avoid, no matter how much care one takes. I am sending you new wings at once. The New York office will undoubtedly make some sort of provision for such cases. I will announce it shortly.

Nathaniel M. Schorin—Thank you for the very fine letter and the very fine suggestion. I will get in touch with your principal at once. I hope that a Flight Squadron can be organized at your school.

Tomorrow Mr. Lawrence Shaw, the National Director of the Junior Birdmen, will tell you more about the national motto contest. Look for his interesting story which will tell you about the mottoes that won in other parts of the country.

HAPPY LANDINGS!

500 TO OPEN PITT DRIVE

The general phase of the $1,650,000 campaign to complete the Cathedral of Learning will be opened at a meeting of 500 volunteer workers in the cathedral Thursday night. The meeting will be held in the commons room. Prior to the business sessions the workers will make a tour of inspection of the building.

Workers in the citizens committee redoubled their efforts yesterday to complete their organization, according to Thomas Fitzgerald, chairman. His vice chairmen include Burton J. Cassady, Frank L. Duggan, Harry A. Estep, Dr. Benjamin G. Graham, Robert H. McClintic, Henry Russell Miller, W. A. Neuman, G. A. Price, C. C. Sheppard, H. G. Feldman and Charles Lockhart.

Among group leaders under these vice chairmen are: D. H. Bell, Leon D. Hansen, Dr. Gilbert Myers, Carlton Procter, Herbert L. Spencer, J. Boyd Euwer, Edwin P. Griffiths, Pressley H. McCance, Leo G. Altmayer, Dr. DeWitt Hall, Nathan B. Jacobs, Wister L. Lynch, C. R. Wilson.

Wayland S. Bowser, John Lucas, William B. Paul, Elmer T. Sloan, Lucian F. Adams, David S. Cooper, Birger Engstrom, R. E. Hellmund, Eric Johnson.

The women's division will hold a meeting in the Cathedral of Learning Monday at 10 a. m.

Police Seek Owner Of Abandoned Auto

Police today sought the owner of an automobile abandoned at 4731 Butler street, after it had collided with two poles and then struck a fence. The driver of the machine was believed to have been uninjured.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May. 12.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

These old boys with a pair of specs and a tablet and pencil can sit and figure out how much wheat,

Will Rogers

corn and oats can be raised each year in order to sell each bushel of it at a profit. Then along comes a guy called "Elements." This bird "Elements" never went to college, he has never been called an "expert" and he has been laying pretty low for quite a while, but when this guy "Elements" breaks out he can make a sucker out of more experts than anybody. Yours, WILL.—

JUNIOR PATROL MAIL BOX

Know your own city, fellows! We are talking now to the Junior Patrol members who live in or around Pittsburgh, as most of them do.

It really is odd, fellows, how many people are not satisfied with their own district even though they haven't really seen it.

There is an old story about the man who decided that he would make a fortune by finding diamonds. So he sold his house and garden and started out. Diamonds, he thought, must surely be hiding in some far corner of the earth.

And so he hunted up and down the world and saw all the far places and the wild places, hunting for the precious stones. But never a one did he find and he was discouraged indeed. Then he came home. Where his house and garden had been was a big diamond mine. The diamonds he had hunted in the far places were right in his own backyard all the time—but now they belonged to somebody else.

Pittsburgh, if a fellow has eyes to see it, is one of the most beautiful cities. Even if you are a Junior Patrol member living in some other city you would enjoy paying Pittsburgh a visit.

There are so many interesting things here that a fellow doesn't know where to start telling about them. Every visitor who comes here is surprised to see so many hundreds of bridges. Riding up and down the rivers on steamboats you pass under many of these bridges and it is a wonderful sight. We wonder how many Junior Patrol members have seen them.

Then there are the beautiful parks, including the new one, Frick Park. The green trees and bushes and meadows and the springs of water and curving roadways make a wonderful place for people to walk and play, away from the city.

If your Junior Patrol club has a sponsor, fellows, ask him or her to take you sightseeing. It's lots of fun.

JUNIOR PATROL PLEDGE

I promise to help children less fortunate than I am.
I promise to do my best to make my parents proud of me.
I promise to watch carefully when crossing streets and to aid other children in keeping out of danger.
I promise to study hard and do errands willingly.
I promise to be a 100% Junior Patrol member.

First Lady On Radio Tonight

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Floyd Gibbons are heard in the first of a new series of programs beginning an NBC-WCAE network tonight at 8:30.

The First Lady, speaking on "The American Home," plans to touch on the significance of home life in America.

The famous headline hunter is scheduled regularly on the programs with a rapid-fire report of the day's news.

* * *

Eddie Duchin's orchestra, always easy on the ear, is heard over KDKA tonight at 9:30.

* * *

The Carefree Carnival, gala West Coast revue, comes in over WCAE at midnight.

* * *

"One Man's Family," another California favorite, gave way to a Florida program last Saturday night, but is heard over WCAE tonight at 11:30.

* * *

Homer S. Cummings, United States Attorney General, speaking on "Coping With Crime," broadcasts over NBS-WCAE at 10:30 tonight.

* * *

NEW SINGER

Carolyn Marsh, new radio singer, is featured on WCAE at 10 p. m. with the Saxon Sisters and Lennie Hayton's orchestra.

The A Capella Choir, of First Presbyterian Church of Homestead, under the direction of Frederick H. Welty, presents a half-hour program over KDKA tonight at 8:45.

GLOBE TROTTING

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Orion Lotz, Wilkinsburg, is only one of the boys who is disturbed because the Pirate management does not have a boys' day similar to a ladies' day. The boys seem to think that this year Mr. Benswanger has forgotten them.

No, boys, Mr. Benswanger hasn't forgotten you nor his own boyhood days. He figures that when the summer months roll around it is hard enough sometimes to keep the young ones wanting to go to school without offering them the added attraction of a free baseball game.

There will be a boys' day this year, but it won't be announced until after school summer vacations begin.

* * *

Mrs. B. E. Hoffman, Midway—The manager of WWSW is Frank Smith. His office is at the studios in the Hotel Schenley.

Steve Sokolovich, Library—No, you do not have to pay for Sun-Telegraph subscriptions in advance.

You can if it is more convenient for you to do so.

When you subscribe or take orders for the World's Fair trip campaign the customer can make any arrangement with the paper boy that is agreeable to both of them.

Most people pay the paper boy at the end of each week.

Forgetful Husbands Gently Reminded

Lillian, daughter in "Our Family" dramatization, gives forgetful husbands a lesson in observance of "Mother's Day" tonight at 7 over WCAE.

At 6:45 WCAE offers Front Page Dramas.

Tomorrow night at 7 WCAE will dramatize the opening episodes in the super-thriller detective story, "The Thin Man," now running in serial form in the Sun-Telegraph.

Fight Fans Approve McNamee

By AIRCASTER

Until today Graham McNamee never indulged himself in a prefight interview or even ventured a statement. I wrangled Mac into it today, because of the inevitable reaction of the wise guys following the news that Mac would describe the Baer-Carnera heavyweight battle as expected, the sapient specialists brought up the old complaint that—

"McNamee had evinced prejudice at the Schmeling-Sharkey affair; McNamee is now on a program with Baer and will be one-sided; McNamee is not a sports announcer; he misses blows; he's strictly a studio chatterer."

Always, I have marveled at McNamee's placid taciturnity. He is never riled by criticism. You pan him today; you meet him tomorrow and he invites you to have lunch. He never recriminates. But this morning, I managed to get him talking.

"It's true," he said, "I do miss a lot at the ringside. Words can't move as rapidly as fists. But I do know the blows. It is my opinion, however, that the audience doesn't often know, and often doesn't care what left hooks or infighting are.

PAINTS PICTURE

The listener wants a dramatic picture of the scene, to know the progress of a fight. I try to supply this information as fast as I can. I get excited like everyone else. The mail tells me that most of the listeners enjoy that—they feel the contagion of it. I try to be natural. I don't presume to be an expert.

"I am merely a reporter on such occasions. As to prejudice, I should like to say that my job depends on fairness, and when I am at the mike, no contender is my friend, nor my enemy."

Disclosing Exactly What's Expected of the Huge Lens Now Being Made for the Largest Telescope in the World

If light rays could be bent it would be easy to see Egypt from New York with the new lens recently cast for a giant 200-inch telescope.

SCIENTISTS may soon be able to find out if there is an end to space; only one of many puzzles of the sky that a new 200-inch telescopic lens may solve.

At the moment, the telescope's huge lens is a twenty-five-ton mass of molten glass, gradually cooling in a special oven. It will take four years to finish the massive disc. When completed, however, scientists may know more about the moon's shifting shadows and other heavenly puzzles, as revealed in an article in next Sunday's American Weekly. Be sure to look for it!

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh's Society Happenings

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

As the month advances, everyone, it seems, is becoming more and more golf-minded. So magnetic has the sport become for women golfers at Fox Chapel, that they've scheduled, in addition to the usual May, June, July and August events, golf "dates" way to the end of October!

There'll be playing every Thursday, handicap competitions. In addition, there'll be matches for the team at other clubs.

Among them will be one on May 17 at Oakmont with the Westmoreland as the opposing team. May 22 the Fox Chapel women will play Allegheny at Butler, on May 25 the Field Club at Westmoreland.

Tournament Slated for June 3

On Sunday, June 3 there'll be a special tournament—first round mixed Scotch handicap. And there'll be a series of matches during June with teams from other clubs.

August 30 will bring the one-day tournament of the Women's Golf Association of Western Pennsylvania. September and October will bring in addition to the usual Thursday handicap competitions, playing for championships.

At a meeting yesterday morning of the women's golf committee of the Pittsburgh Field Club, Mrs. Walter Curley was chosen general chairman again of the committee. Mrs. C. L. Beares was elected tournament chairman; Mrs. C. I. Wendt, handicap chairman; Mrs. B. L. Murphy, prize chairman, and Mrs. W. H. Taylor, chairman of ringer scores.

Southern Club Holds Annual Luncheon

Mrs. D. B. Frampton took up her duties as president of the Southern Club for a second year when the club held its annual luncheon in the Hotel Schenley yesterday. About 150 members and guests attended the affair at which there was a delightful program. Mark Myer and Edwin Phillips, violins; Ero Davidson, cello, and Emeric Simbali, tenor, with Miss Janet Spaugh at the piano, gave the music, and Freeman Hammond presented dramatic readings in costume.

The original menu cards were the work of Mrs. James McFall, a former president, and the place favors were tiny baskets of gum drop flowers.

The club's postponed altruistic day will be held Friday in the home of Mrs. Joseph W. Marsh, Woodland road. It will be a tea from 3 until 5 o'clock and a silver offering will be taken for the Children's Hospital.

Aged Doctor Addresses B. P. W.

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Telling her audience that she didn't believe in clubs, that to belong to a club one must belong to the herd and could not be an individual and that women's clubs never develop the mind, 110-year-old Dr. Charlotte Davenport spoke before the Pittsburgh Business and Professional Women's Club at luncheon in Kaufmann's yesterday.

At the close of her talk, which had to do with the "new brotherhood" that is coming and in which old ideas will have no place and which was accompanied by sweeping gestures, the speaker invited her listeners to ask questions. When the queries were a little slow in coming (for had not the learned speaker stated that she had no time to give to people who had no ideas to give to her?), she informed her hearers inclusively that they were all self-conscious and that was the reason they "did not make men happy."

To some, however, who overcame this apparently deplorable trait and boldly ventured questions, her replies were that they (the questioners) were impossible or lacking in intelligence.

With that inconsistency supposed in some quarters to be characteristic of her sex, Dr. Davenport said food meant nothing to her and almost the next instant complained that she had had no decent coffee—only dishwater—since coming to Pittsburgh. She exhorted against unselfishness and then (again the sweeping gesture) declared, "Never do what other people want you to do, but what you want to do yourself."

Dr. Andrey Avinoff and Prince Serge Gagarin, who were guests, too, made brief, gracious little speeches. In the audience were members of the Women's Advertising Club and the Quota Club, which, like the hostess organization, do a considerable amount of unselfish philanthropic work.

Bible Class Plans Quilt Exhibit

Unique announcements printed on paper towels have been sent out by the Ladies' Progressive Bible Class of Trinity Lutheran Church, McKeesport, telling of a towel and apron display and quilt exhibit to be held Wednesday from one until 10 o'clock in the vacant parsonage next to the church. Mrs. Effie Gill is chairman for the affair.

Ice to Be Speaker At Regent Square

Friends of members will be guests of the Regent Square Woman's Club on Wednesday afternoon when the club meets in the Wilkins School to hear the Rev. Orva Lee Ice. Mr. Ice is to speak on "Religion in the Home," and Mrs. Wallace Bishop will sing.

Miss Ethel McEwen to Wed Smith Brinker Today

At a pretty home ceremony at 4 o'clock this afternoon the marriage of Miss Ethel Virginia McEwen and Smith Brinker will be solemnized by the Rev. Dr. Edward C. McCown, of the Mt. Lebanon United Presbyterian Church, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Charles D. Fulton, of the Beaver United Presbyterian Church.

The wedding will take place in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Allen McEwen, of Mt. Lebanon. The bridegroom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Wilson Brinker, of Chicago, Ill. The living room of the home will be decorated with cibotium ferns, bamboos and crotons forming an altar, with tall seven branch candelabra on either side.

Mrs. John Helminger is to play the music and Miss Loretta Eifler will sing.

The bride, who will be given in marriage by her father, is to wear her mother's wedding dress of lovely white silk brocade and a veil of tulle cascading from a wreath of orange blossoms. Mrs. Robert Lawrence Spurgeon, of Evanston, Ill., as her sister's matron of honor, is wearing larkspur pink satin with a Victorian jackette. Joseph McEwen, brother of the bride, will be best man and serving as ushers will be William James Caldwell, of New Castle, and William Henry Schafer, of Youngstown, O.

Tea will be served after the reception. There was a breakfast at 11:30 o'clock this morning in the Hotel Schenley in honor of the bride and bridegroom, given by Mrs. Spurgeon for members of the families.

Mr. Brinker and his bride will motor south and spend some time at the summer home of Miss Harriet Grene in the foothills of the Smoky Mountains near Gatlinburg, Tenn.

Gangster Sweetheart Suspected In Murder of Wynant's Secretary

By DASHIELL HAMMETT

(Soon to appear on the screen at Loew's Penn Theater as a thrilling motion picture made by Cosmopolitan Production for Metro-Goldwyn Mayer.)

We went back to our food. I took the pistol out of my pocket and examined it. It had been kicked around a lot. There were two cartridges in it, one in the chamber, one in the magazine.

"What are you going to do with it?" Nora asked.

"Nothing till I find out if it's the one Julia Wolf was killed with. It's a .32."

"But she said—"

"She got it in a speakeasy from a man—for a bracelet, I heard her."

Nora leaned over her sandwich at me. Her eyes were very shiny and almost black. "Do you suppose she got it from her stepfather?"

"I do," I said, but I said it too earnestly.

Nora said: "Maybe she did; you don't know. And you don't believe her story."

"Listen, darling, tomorrow I'll buy you a whole lot of detective stories, but don't worry your pretty little head over mysteries tonight. All she was trying to tell you was that she was afraid Jorgensen was waiting to try to make her when she got home and she was afraid she was drunk enough to let him."

"But her mother!"

"This family's a family. You can—"

Dorothy Wynant, standing unsteadily in the doorway in a nightgown much too long for her, blinked at the light and said: "Please, may I come in for a little while? I'm afraid in there alone."

"Sure."

She came over and curled up beside me on the sofa while Nora went to get something to put around her.

Jorgsens Arrive

The three of us were at breakfast early that afternoon when the Jorgensens arrived. Nora answered the telephone and came away from it trying to pretend she was not tickled. "It's your mother," she told Dorothy.

"She's downstairs. I told her to come up."

Dorothy said: "Damn it. I wish I hadn't phoned her."

I said: "We might just as well be living in the lobby."

Nora said: "He doesn't mean that." She patted Dorothy's shoulder.

The doorbell rang. I went to the door.

Eight years had done no damage to Mimi's looks. She laughed and held her hands out to me. "Merry Christmas. It's awfully good to see you after all these years. This is my husband, Mr. Charles, Chris."

I said, "I'm glad to see you, Mimi," and shook hands with Jorgensen. He was probably five years younger than his wife, a tall thin erect dark man, carefully dressed and sleek, with smooth hair and a waxed mustache.

We went inside.

Mimi, when the introductions were over, apologized to Nora for popping in on us. She turned her smile on Dorothy. "Better get dressed, honey."

Honey grumbled through a mouthful of toast that she didn't see why she had to waste an afternoon at Aunt Alice's even if it was Christmas. "I bet Gilbert's not going."

Mimi said Asta was a lovely dog and asked me if I had any idea where that ex-husband of hers might be.

"No."

Unwise to Disappear

She went on playing with the dog. "He's crazy, absolutely crazy, to disappear at a time like this. No wonder the police at first thought he had something to do with it.

She looked up at me. "Haven't you seen the papers?"

"No."

"It's a man named Morelli—a gangster. He killed her. He was her lover."

"They caught him?"

"Not yet, but he did it. I wish I could find Clyde. Macaulay won't help me at all. He says he doesn't know where he is, but that's ridiculous. He has powers of attorney from him and everything and I know very well he's in touch with Clyde. Do you think Macaulay's trustworthy?"

"He's Wynant's lawyer," I said. "There's no reason why you should trust him."

"Just what I thought." She moved over a little on the sofa. "Sit down. I've got millions of things to ask you."

"How about a drink first?"

"Anything but egg-nog," she said.

I distributed the drinks and sat down beside Mimi.

She said: "Your wife's lovely."

"I like her."

"Tell me the truth, Nick: do you think Clyde's really crazy? I mean crazy enough that something ought to be done about it."

"How do I know?"

"I'm worried about the children," she said. "I've no claim on him any more—the settlement he made when I divorced him took care of all that—but the children have. We're absolutely penniless now and I'm worried about them. If he is crazy he's just as likely as not to throw away everything and leave them without a cent. What do you think I ought to do?"

"Thinking about putting him in the booby-hatch?"

"No—o," she said slowly, "but I would like to talk to him." She put a hand on my arm. "You could find him."

I shook my head.

Decide to Stay

Jorgensen turned to address his wife: "Mrs. Charles has the great kindness to suggest that we do not—"

"Yes," Nora said, "why don't you stay awhile? There'll be some people coming in. It won't be very exciting, but—" She waved her glass a little to finish the sentence.

"I'd love to," Mimi replied slowly, "but I'm afraid Alice—"

"Make your apologies to her by telephone," Jorgensen suggested.

"I'll do it," Dorothy said.

Mimi nodded. "Be nice to her."

Dorothy went into the bedroom. Everybody seemed much brighter. Nora caught my eye and winked merrily and I had to take it and like it because Mimi was looking at me then.

Mimi asked me: "You really didn't want us to stay, did you?"

"Of course."

"Chances are you're lying. Weren't you sort of fond of poor Julia?"

"Poor Julia' sounds swell from you. I liked her all right."

Mimi put her hand on my arm again. "She broke up my life with Clyde. Naturally I hated her—then—but that's a long time ago. I had no feeling against her when I went to see her Friday. And, Nick, I saw her die. She didn't deserve to die. It was horrible. No matter what I'd felt, there'd be nothing left but pity now. I meant 'Poor Julia' when I said it."

"I don't know what you're up to," I said. "I don't know what any of you are up to."

"Any of us," she repeeated. "Has Dorry been—"

Dorothy came in from the bedroom. "I squared it." She kissed her mother on the mouth and sat down beside her.

Mimi, looking in her compact-mirror so see her mouth had not been smeared, asked: "She wasn't peevish about it?"

"No, I squared it. What do you have to do to get a drink?"

I said: "You have to walk over to that table where the ice and bottles are and pour it."

Doesn't Know Game

Mimi said: "You drink too much."

"I don't drink as much as Nick." She went over to the table.

Mimi shook her head. "These children! I mean you were pretty fond of Julia, weren't you?"

Dorothy called: "You want one, Nick?"

"Thanks," I said; then to Mimi, "I like her well enough.'

"Your'e the damnedest evasive man," she complained. "Did you like her as much as you used to like me, for instance?"

"You mean those couple of afternoons we killed?"

Her laugh was genuine. "That's certainly an answer.' She turned to Dorothy, carrying glasses toward us. "You'll have to get a robe that shade of blue, darling. It's very becoming to you."

I took one of the glasses from Dorothy and said I thought I had better get dressed.

Synopsis

Nick Charles, noted detective, who tells the story of "The Thin Man," and Nick's wife, Nora, meet Dorothy Wynant, daughter of a former client, in a speakeasy. Dorothy asks where her father is and Nick refers her to Herbert Macaulay, Wynant's attorney. Macaulay calls on Nick and tells him Mimi, Wynant's divorced wife, is hunting him.

Next day Nick reads of the murder of Julia Wolf, Wynant's secretary. Mimi found the body when she went to get Wynant's address.

While a Mr. Norman is telephoning to Nick a loud report as of a shot is heard and his words end abruptly.

It is learned Julia was a former sweetheart of a racketeer.

Dorothy appears at Nick's apartment and flashes a gun which she says she got in a speakeasy. She is drunk and Nora puts her to bed.

Now go on with Charles' narrative.

Men's Ideas On Recipes Sought

Cooking is not, though we constantly think it so, limited to woman's domain. Look in hotel kitchens . . . you'll find most of the chefs men. Even in our own homes the males display an interest in concocting prize dishes.

Prudence Penny, herself, knows many men who are particularly fine cooks. One has an endless supply of ways of preparing fish. Another can make the best spaghetti his friends ever tasted. You yourself probably used recipes published in the Sun-Telegraph prize column that were sent in by men.

If the men in your family have special recipe "creations" of their own, let them send them in to Prudence Penny, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, just as you do. After all, it is important for everyone, regardless of sex or age, to have a working knowledge of cooking.

All the recipes you send in are carefully judged and a daily award of $5, plus five $1 prizes, is given the six best. No recipes are returned.

Five Dollar Prize Winner

CLAIRE M. WALSH,
5600 Forbes street, Oakland Station.

HEALTH SPINACH SOUP

Melt one tablespoon of butter in saucepan. Add one tablespoon minced gardening greens, one teaspoonful minced parsley and one tablespoon minced fresh green onion. Allow to cook in butter for two minutes, but do not allow to get brown. Sprinkle in one teaspoon flour and stir mixture about. Slowly stir in two or four cups of milk (more if one desires a thinner soup). When blended well, add two cups of chopped spinach which had been cooked 10 or 15 minutes. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Bring to boiling point, but do not boil. Simmer for three minutes and serve at once.

Five $1 Prize Winners

MRS. GEORGE WARNER,
7315 Calumet street, Swissvale.

MUSHROOM BISQUE

Two teaspoons butter.
Two teaspoons minced onion.
One-fourth cup minced celery.
One and one-half cups mushrooms, cut fine.
Three cups chicken stock or water.
Salt and pepper.
Eight crackers, crumbled.
Two cups evaporated milk.
Melt butter. Add minced vegetables and mushrooms and cook for five minutes. Add stock and seasoning. Boil until celery is tender. Add crumbled crackers and milk and serve very hot.

MRS. MARY N. CUNNINGHAM,
326 Prospect street, Uniontown.

BOSTON CREAM CANDY

Three cups sugar.
One cup evaporated milk.
One cup milk.
Three tablespoonfuls butter.
Three-fourths cupful walnut meats.
One-eighth teaspoonful salt.

Caramelize one cupful of the sugar and when lightly browned add the evaporated milk. Stir until the resultant lump is dissolved, then add the remaining sugar and milk. Stir until the sugar is dissolved, then cook to 238 degrees Fahrenheit or until a little tested in cold water forms a soft ball. Remove from the fire. Add the butter and the salt. Beat until creamy, then add the nuts and when firm pour into a greased pan nine inches square. When cool, cut into squares.

MRS. G. A. BRANCART,
Box 40, Sturgeon.

BEAN ROAST

One cup shelled peanuts.
Two cups mashed potatoes.
Two cups cooked lima beans (fresh or canned).
One-fourth cup milk.
One egg.
One teaspoon salt.
One pinch paprika.
One medium sized onion, grated fine.

Grind the peanuts, using the finest blade of the food chopper. In a well-greased baking dish place a layer of potatoes, a layer of beans and a layer of peanuts. Continue making layers until all ingredients are used. Blend milk with well-beaten egg and seasoning and pour over the top. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until brown. Serve with brown sauce or tomato sauce.

MRS. J. R. HEINRICH,
3506 Brownsville road, Brentwood.

RYE BREAD
(American)

One cake yeast.
One cup milk, scalded and cooled.
Two cups lukewarm water.
One tablespoon lard or butter melted.
Five cups rye flour.
One and one-half cups sifted white flour.
One tablespoon salt.

Dissolve yeast in lukewarm liquid. Add two and one-half cups rye flour or enough to make sponge. Beat well. Cover and set aside in a warm place, free from draft, to rise about two hours. When light add white flour, lard or butter, rest of rye flour to make a soft dough, and lastly the salt. Turn on a board and knead five minutes. Place in a well-greased bowl, cover and let rise until double in bulk, about two hours. Turn on board and shape into long loaves. Place in floured shallow pans, cover and let rise till light, about one hour. Brush with white of egg and water to glaze. With sharp knife cut lightly three strokes across top and place in oven. Bake in slower oven than for white bread. Caraway seed may be used if desired.

Note—By adding one-half cup of sour dough, left from previous baking, an acid flavor is obtained, which is considered by many a great improvement. This should be added to sponge.

MRS. R. M. CAMPBELL,
General Delivery, West Newton.

SALMON KLOPPS

One can pink or red salmon.
One teaspoon minced parsley.
One teaspoon lemon juice.
Two eggs.
One-half teaspoon celery salt.
One teaspoon finely minced onion.

Mix ingredients in order given, adding the eggs unbeaten. Form balls size of a walnut and poach in water at simmering point. When firm serve on toast or saltines with white sauce. Caper sauce is also good with these.

FANCIES LIGHTLY TURN TO FURS

By PRUNELLA WOOD

SPRING FRESHETS may be on and the jolly jump-ups rife on the landscape, but no woman is going to turn a literally chilly shoulder on her fur neckpieces. Unless she is determined to spend the next few months in a city inferno, in fact, she will keep something of fur conveniently at hand all summer. Ask the woman who vacations in the tamarack localities.

* * *

YOU CAN'T BEAT a necklace of soft brown skins, be they sable, marten or kolinsky. You can tie it, however, with a scarf of silver fox, which will look just as lush with your tailleur, your best wedding reception gown, or your evening costume. Little capes of ermine or chinchilla will be the peaks of summer evening extravagance, but any one who has not seen the latest things in white fox has missed a regal decoration which does not come so high.

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Synd., Inc.)

It is a gorgeous thing, this eight skin scarf of sable. It can be worn in a dozen different effects which include cape and muffler notions, and it will day or evening costumes.

An ermine wrap of any sort generally enters the family as a potential heirloom. This soft little cape with its somewhat Elizabethan collar and throw tie is very 1934, but it will not outgrow coming fashions.

Many women prefer long haired furs to the flat pelts. Two rich silver fox skins are looped together to make this handsome spring scarf.

Something New in a Slenderizing Surplice

Pattern 1840

Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

You can't do better than a surplice for slenderness—but you can do something new and better with the surplice, and this frock proves it! To begin with, it is augmented by a graceful cape which is a chic-saver for the woman who is a little too ample above the waistline. Then remark the way the gown ties around the figure—there is a sash in the back, which you see in the small view. It begins at the point where the cape is attached to the gown on each side of the front, and the end on the under side slips through a slash in the right of the garment.

Pattern 1840 is available in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50. Size 36 takes 4⅛ yards 39-inch fabric and 1-6 yard 6-inch lace. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send 15 CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Hudson Regatta Interests Local Fans

Motor boat racing followers in the Pittsburgh district, keenly alive to the sport this year with the impending William Randolph Hearst-Oakmont Boat Club two-day regatta to be held at Oakmont, Saturday and Sunday, July 14-15, are vitally interested in the staging of the seventh annual Albany-to-New York race on the Hudson River, to be staged tomorrow.

Sixty-two drivers, eight more than last year, already are in the list and additional entries will be received up to post time. Gar Wood, Jr., will drive a boat in the class A race.

Hurry! All Have Chance For Rushmore's Prizes

Have you entered the Mount Rushmore National Memorial Inscription Competition?

Do you know how a great national monument is being carved in the mountainside of the Black Hills of South Dakota to carry the message of America's epic through an estimated 1,600,000 years?

Do you know that every man, woman and youth is invited to write a 600-word history of the nation's nine most important historical episodes through a competition being conducted by the Sun-Telegraph and associated Hearst newspapers for the Mount Rushmore National Memorial Commission?

If you are a resident of Western Pennsylvania, Eastern Ohio or Northern West Virginia you are invited to participate in this project that gives every citizen an opportunity of sharing in the creation of this great cenotaph. The competition continues until May 30, when the texts from entrants will be accepted until midnight. If you have overlooked this patriotic endeavor or are just learning of the opportunity to win cash and scholarship prizes, read tomorrow's Sunday Sun-Telegraph for all details.

The closing date is not too near for new participants to begin their text. Read the rules, the awards and helpful suggestions to appear tomorrow. Clip the rules for future reference. Study the nine specific episodes of history that must form the basis of the text and enter the most historical competition ever conducted.

SPEAK UP, SISTERS :-: Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance :-: By MARION BRUNOT

Sight of His Old Girl Too Much for Him

The SIGHT of the OLD GIRL was TOO MUCH for him. He thought he had forgotten her, and talked her all over with the new girl, and was sure of himself. Then playing along, he and the new girl were at a dance.

And there was the OLD FLAME, bright as ever, and dancing in the arms of other fellows. And he was ALL HET UP about it. He even went so far as to neglect the new girl and hang around the old girl's brother to find out who was the long legged boob who had taken his sister home.

And the new girl, broken-hearted, writes and tells me all about it.

What shall she do? Is this boy friend HERS or does he belong to the OLD GIRL.

Miss Brunot

The trouble is he doesn't really bury the past. He only talked big of having done so. And when a man still talks big of his having forgotten anyone, you may bet your last dollar that he has done no such a thing. When a fellow is really through caring for a girl he not only thinks her six feet in the ground but he doesn't THINK AT ALL OF HER.

What's the use of worrying over anything that's gone, he reasons. Stale subjects aren't palatable. Baseball, tennis, the movies are much better conversation.

You say you care for this boy friend. But seeing him with the other girl has set your mind ahead, and you wonder if it is worth your while to have him around so much. You ask me if I really think this old flame will be the WEAK LINK in your chain of happiness.

And I say, right off the reel, YES.

LET HIM GO BACK

Let him go back now to her, and find out that absence has made a dream out of something that doesn't even exist. Then if he does this and comes back to you, he'll be YOURS for KEEPS.

I can never forget a miserable evening I spent in a very fine home. The woman of the house hadn't let her man go back. She had held on to him even when he was casting sheep's eyes at the old girl. And what was making the evening so uncomfortable was that the OLD GIRL had COME BACK to TOWN. And the woman was worried, for her husband hadn't come home for dinner.

Where was he? With the old FLAME? Or maybe standing on Main street, hoping for a glimpse of her. Of course the man was hers by law. But was that all that was necessary?

And there it was, fear, chagrin, waiting.

I am sure you wouldn't want this to be YOU. So make the WEAK LINK strong now. E. M. W. Or find a NEW CHAIN.

WHY GIVE HIM UP?

Dear Miss Brunot:

I love a boy who is several months younger than I am. I suspect a couple of my girl friends of loving him also. He has never told me he loves me, but he acts as if he thought I cared for him. During the time I have known him I have never been angry at him but once. Do you think I should give him up? And let the other girls have him? PATIENCE.

Certainly not. Why should you? He seems to prefer you to anyone else. After all, you aren't sure the other girls are in love with him. A difference of months in age makes no difference where love comes in.

Dear Miss Brunot:

I have been going with a boy for almost a year. During this time he has only DATED another girl once. He is jolly and always on the go, and I love him and know that he loves me. He has told me so many times. I am only 16 years of age, and he is 17. He is working as a truck driver.

I see him and talk to him nearly every day. And I go out with him when I haven't any night work. I am glad to say that our parents know about this. Do you think it right to keep steady company at our age? WAITING.

You and your boy friend are young to be really in love. I would not contemplate marriage for ever so long. For youth like yours is the time to play just a little while, and not the time to assume serious responsibilities.

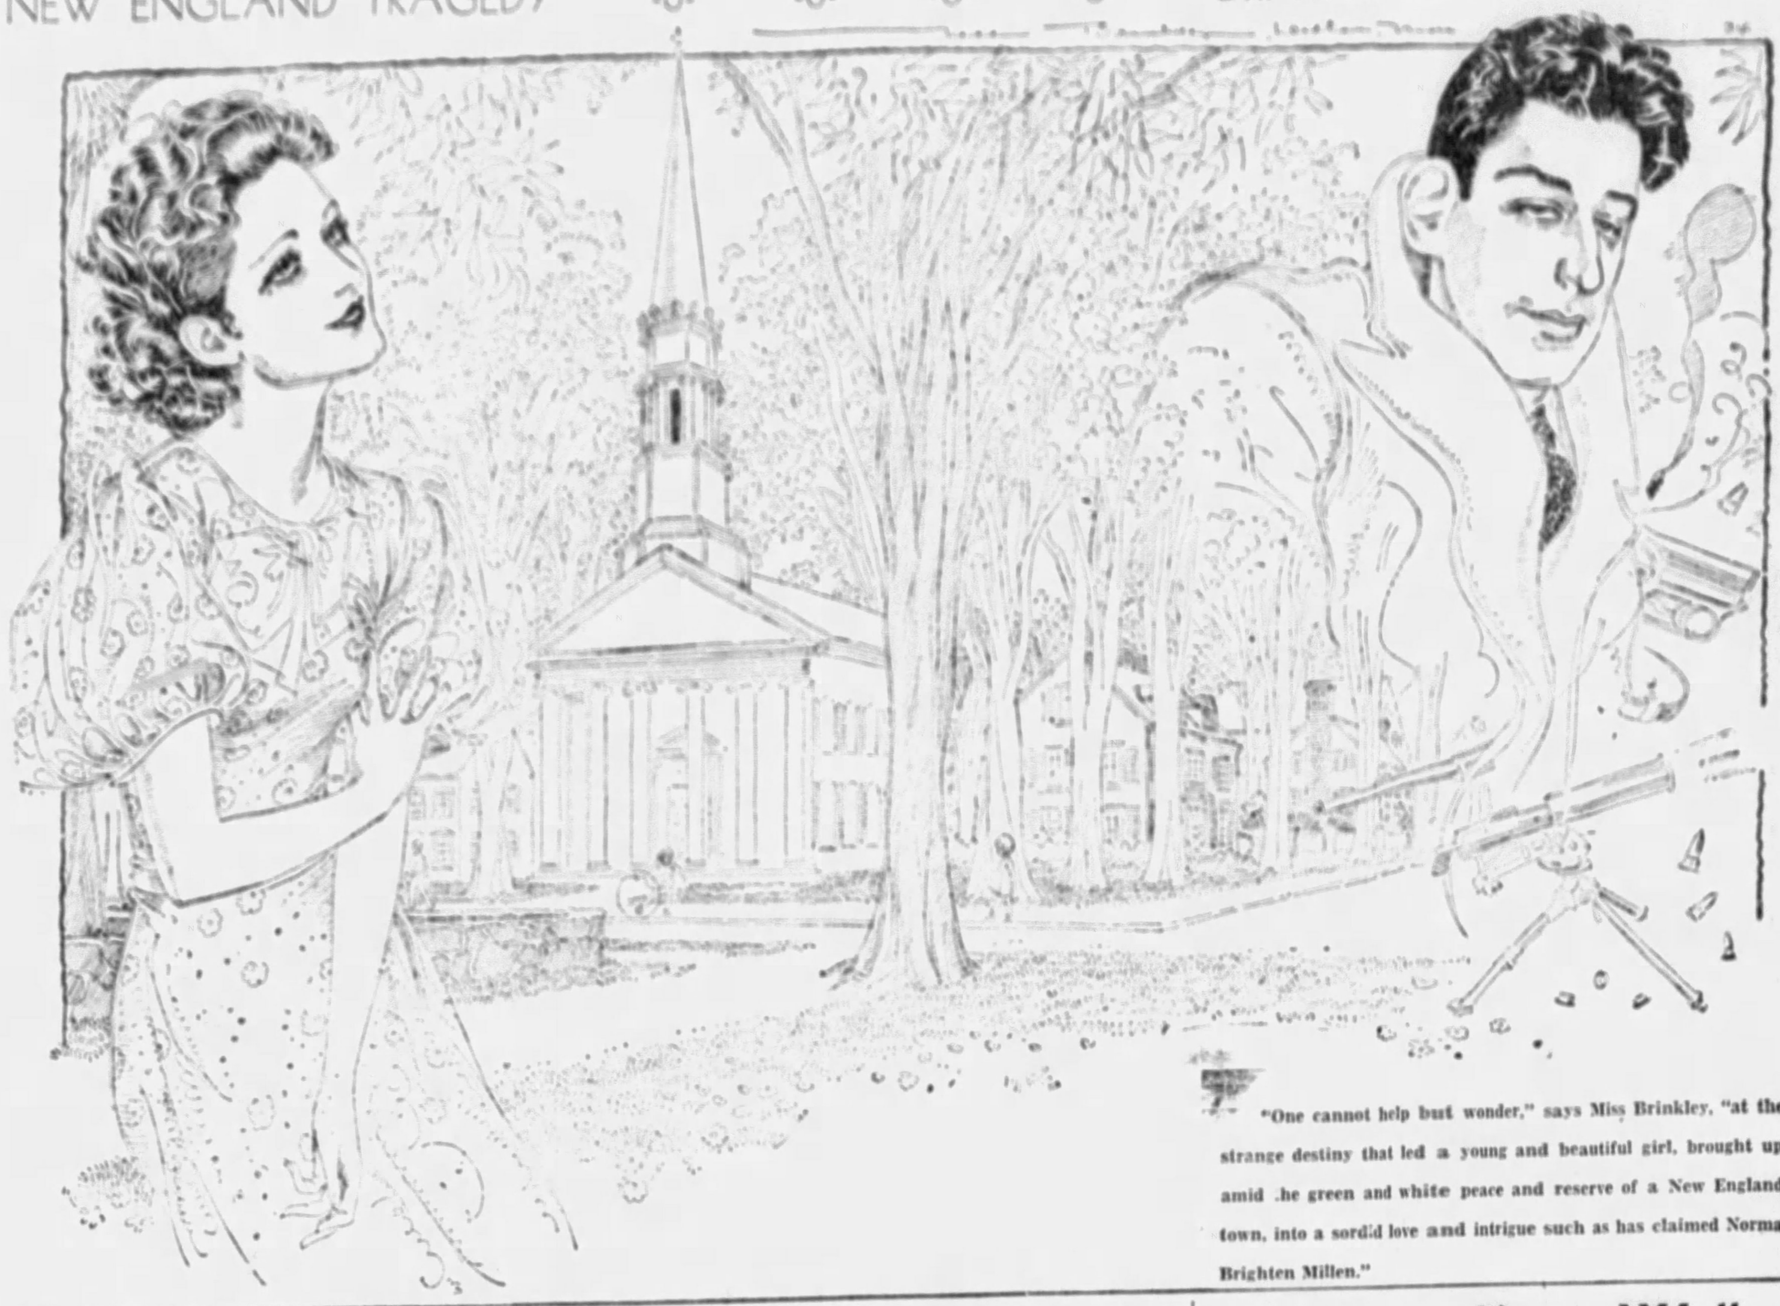
RELIGIOUS DIFFERENCES

Mary, I cannot see how you are going to overcome the difficulty of religion. You say, positively, you will not join the man's church. That you have a religion of your own, and even explain to me what it is.

You also inform me that he won't give up his religion, and that he insists you join his church. Otherwise, he will have to give you up, no matter how deeply he cares for you.

It does seem, under the circumstances, you had better let him go. You will find happiness with some other man who has views more like your own. There are many such, and fine young men, too. People who have deeply rooted principles, never find happiness when they let them be mastered for awhile by emotion.

NEW ENGLAND TRAGEDY -o- -o- -o- -o- DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY



"One cannot help but wonder," says Miss Brinkley, "at the strange destiny that led a young and beautiful girl, brought up amid the green and white peace and reserve of a New England town, into a sordid love and intrigue such as has claimed Norma Brighten Millen."

Review Happenings of Evening

My father looked at me speculatively, hesitatingly, as I reminded him of his promise to tell me what it all meant."

"I'm not sure that I know myself—now," he said at last. "Something has come up that makes me doubt my own conclusions; something about which I feel I should consult Hugh before I make any final decision concerning it. However, if you wish, I will keep my promise and tell you what I thought I had discovered."

I saw his reluctance to speak and throttled my curiosity forthwith.

"Don't tell me now!" I exclaimed hastily. "I would much rather you would wait until you are quite sure of it all. And for that, you will have to wait until Hugh comes back, won't you?"

"Yes." My father's voice sounded puzzled. "Yet I do not think even Hugh has all the threads in his hand as yet."

"Then," said Lillian briskly, "why waste any time in conjectures until Hugh gets here? Let's talk of something more trivial but quite as pestiferous as this performance of Lee Chow's. When are your various feminine guests scheduled to go home—Ede, and the Arlen pest and her mother? Helena expects to depart with her brood, tomorrow she told me, but I haven't had any advance information upon the others."

TALKS AGAINST TIME

She was talking against time, I knew, thinking it wise to divert my mind from the terror which the inexplicable conduct of Lee Chow had brought to me. But her query had recalled an injunction which Lee Chow had laid upon me earlier in the evening, so it was that reluctantly I brought the conversation back to him again.

"They all have said they're going back tomorrow," I said, "but your question reminds me of something Lee Chow wished me to ask you."

"Lee Chow? When?" Lillian's voice was sharp, incisive, and I saw that my father's listening attitude was one of eager intentness.

"This evening after Mary and Noel made their effective getaway," I said.

"What did he ask?"

"He wanted me to find out just when Marion's birthday was, saying that he must remain for the opening of her lock box upon that day."

INTENDS TO VAMOOSE

"The inference being that he means to vamoose immediately afterward," she commented. "Do you see, Chief?"

"Yes, I see," my father returned, and I felt as if something as yet unknown to me was in the obscure reference.

"Of course, this seizure of his may knock the whole project of opening the box galley west," she went on. "With the knowledge of that poisoned needle concealed somewhere in that envelope, I can't say I fancy anybody but Lee Chow tackling it."

I wanted to say that, above all others, I did not wish to see Lee Chow's hands manipulating that envelope with the deadly envenomed needle inside it. The poison was so deadly, so quick to act, what was to prevent him from—

My father's upflung hand interrupted me.

"Listen!" he said.

Through the open window came the sound of a car furiously driven.

BREAK RECORDS

"Hugh!" Lillian exclaimed, "and coming like a bat out of hell! Exluce it, please. I haven't a fresher simile in my system."

She sent her gamin grin in my direction, and I knew that she was again endeavoring to lessen the tension under which I was laboring.

"Harry and he must have beaten all records to and from the hospital," my father said, consulting his watch. And then he rose and started for the door.

"I'll go down and meet him," he said. "Lock the door after me. I'll be back shortly. He'll want to come here first, of course, before going to Lee Chow."

He was gone upon the word, and I was painfully conscious that Lillian was carefully averting her eyes from mine in the evident belief that I would show embarrassment at my father's comment. But both spoken and unspoken comment fled from my mind in the next instant when from outside the hall came my father's voice, low and stern.

"What are you doing here, Miss Arlen? I thought you had gone to bed with your mother."

Interesting Facts About Tularemia

"What is tularemia? Is it a new disease? Is it found in this country?"

Dr. Copeland

These are a few questions asked by a worried reader. Perhaps others will be interested.

For many years it was prevalent in Russia and Japan. A careful study of medical records shows that this strange disease has been present in this country for a long time. But it is only recently that the cause of the disease has been known.

In 1907 the affliction was discovered by several American physicians as "rabbit fever," "deer fly fever," and "rodent disease." However, it remained for two physicians in the United States public health service to isolate the organism or germ responsible for the ailment. Because their work was confined to Tulare County, Cal., they named the germ "bacterium tularense." The disease has since been known as "tularemia."

At one time the contagion was believed to afflict rabbits alone. But the germ has been found in various other animals. It is carried from one to the other by deer flies, ticks, lice and fleas. Man contracts the infection from insect bites, or by direct contact with an infected animal.

A recent report tells of a Maine trapper who contracted the disease by skinning an infected fox. This was the first case reported as far north as Maine. As a rule, it has been confined to the Middle West and western states.

The disease is more common than most people suspect. More than a thousand cases of tularemia were reported in the United States last year. Everyone should be familiar with its signs and know what precautions are necessary to guard against it.

The germ enters the body through a scratch or cut of the hands. A pustule or small pimple soon appears. Unlike a simple infection, the pimple enlarges and swells to a great size. This is accompanied by fever, nausea, headache, vomiting and pain throughout the body. The glands in the elbow and armpit become swollen and tender.

Since many of the cases have been traced to the handling of infected rabbit meat, every precaution must be taken when handling this meat.

I am glad to say that recently a serum was developed for the cure of this unusual and sometimes fatal infection. It is hoped that the disease will eventually be eradicated. Until then, every known precaution must be taken against transmitting or contracting it.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Passing for a Swing

One trouble with many Bridge players is that when they hear an opponent on their right bid a suit in which they are both long and strong they immediately take some positive action rather than wait for a development in which a heavy penalty may be collected from opponents. If the Opening bid is honest and the second hand holds six or seven cards of the suit, it follows as a matter of course that the responding hand must be short and the chances are good that before the bidding ends the partnership opening the bidding will get into trouble.

An interesting example of this type of bidding, interspersed as it was with an unusual Opening vulnerable psychic bid, happened recently in a New York Duplicate game. The bidding of East and West was unquestionably over-ambitious and at times silly. Some of the bids are completely ununderstandable, but I give the bidding as it occurred.

East, Dealer.

East and West vulnerable.

	♠ A ♡ Q 10 9 8 7 ◇ 6 3 ♣ Q 9 7 5 2
♠ — ♡ A J 5 4 ◇ K J 10 5 4 2 ♣ J 8 3	North West East South	♠ K 10 9 7 6 2 ♡ K 6 3 2 ◇ — ♣ K 10 6
	♠ Q J 8 5 4 3 ♡ — ◇ A Q 9 8 7 ♣ A 4

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠ (1)	Pass (2)	2 ◇ (3)	Pass
2 ♠ (4)	Double (5)	3 ♡ (6)	Double
4 ♣ (7)	Double (8)	Pass	Pass
4 ♡ (9)	Pass	Pass	Double (10)
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—A dangerous and foolish semi-psychic Opening bid—in fact, first hand psychics are always dangerous and generally foolish, but they are especially so when the players are vulnerable.

2—Of course, South knows there is something wrong with the bidding or with the hand, but there is no occasion for him to take action at this point.

3—Void of partner's suit. West takes out as a matter of course.

4—East feels forced to rebid his semi-psychic.

5—South now feels that he cannot hope for a greater swing. He is, of course, equally prepared to double diamonds.

6—West makes an effort to save something from the wreck.

7—This bid cannot be explained. Why East, who opened a psychic, does not permit his partner to play at three hearts doubled is hard to understand.

8—By this time South has decided to double everything.

9—The contract is now one trick higher.

10—Of course!

In the play West might have been able to make seven tricks had he played his combined hands with meticulous accuracy. However, unnerved by the unusual bidding of his psychic partner, he misplayed the hand and went down 1,400.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Glad to Have Met You

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I will appreciate your advice as to whether or not it is correct to say "I am glad to have met you" when leaving after an introduction. B.

Yes, this is a correct and polite thing to say. There are simple deviations, too, which some people find easier to say, "I am happy to have met you," "I am very glad to have met you," "It has been a great pleasure to meet you." And the next step in enthusiasm is to add to any of these gracious statements "I hope I shall see you again sometime," or "I hope that I am to meet you again soon," or "I enjoyed so much our chat together. I hope that we are to have another one soon."

Beautify Your Closet

Spring—and to the housewife this means spring-cleaning. And the first step in that is brushing out the closets! The modern woman though is not satisfied with just cleaning these—they must be a thing of beauty—a part of her home that she can show with pride! Nothing makes a closet more attractive than such colorful closet accessories as these that, entirely aside from their fresh beauty, protect clothes or help keep the closet in apple-pie order. The flowers are just made of scraps of material—two pieces cut according to the flower pattern and just sewn together. Simple leaf sprays add a touch of embroidery.

Pattern 504 comes to you with a transfer pattern of the flower and leaf sprays; detailed directions and yardages for making each article shown.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York, N. Y.

Household Hints

Use safety pins instead of stick pins when fitting a dress. When you take the dress off they won't fall out.

Rhubarb and other acid fruits will be more digestible for nursery meals if a teaspoon of bicarbonate of soda is added during the cooking. Less vinegar will then be required.

Remember Your Mother on Mother's Day Reminds Fay King

By FAY KING

Mother's Day (tomorrow) is a national tribute to all mothers.

Tell your mother, by word or writing, how much you really love her. It is the only reward she asks. In honoring all mothers we also include those noble, good, women who have "mothered" children not their own.

Countless men and women in the world have a heart full of love and gratitude for good step-mothers or forster-mothers who filled the place of real mothers in their lives.

If any spirit may hover near loved ones, seeing and knowing all, surely it is that of a mother who watches over her children.

She will love and bless those who are good to her dear ones from whom she was taken.

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Hard Job for Cavalcade Pressed in Preakness
Discovery Main Threat

Only One Draftee Fails
Pirates Facing Trouble
Tennis Team Crippled

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's colt Discovery looks like the main obstacle that Cavalcade will have to overcome to win the Preakness at Pimlico today and gain the distinction of being only the fourth horse ever to capture both the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness. The three to score the big double were Sir Barton in 1919, Gallant Fox in 1930, and Burgoo King in 1932. Superior generalship by Jockey Mack Garner was one of the reasons why Cavalcade beat out Discovery in the last eighth of a mile in the Derby. If given a better ride by Jockey Bejshak today, Discovery may not only make the finish closer but will stand a chance of turning the tables on the Derby winner.

A. G. Vanderbilt

At any rate, the Vanderbilt horse probably will be harder to beat than he was a week ago. The Preakness distance is not the same as the Derby route of a mile and a quarter, being only a mile and three-sixteenths, and that fact, together with a different track, and one for which he has a known liking, may help Discovery more than his Derby-winning rival. High Quest, stablemate of Cavalcade, is formidable, and so is Agrarian, the latter never having been out of the money in his last 13 starts. Spy Hill is not to be overlooked, either. But on form, the race would appear to be between Cavalcade and Discovery, with the latter having a better chance than he had in the Derby.

TEN OUT OF ELEVEN DRAFTEES STICKING

Despite the fact that some of the outstanding players of the past were drafted men, notably Grover Alexander, not to mention Pinkey Whitney, Virgil Davis and Hack Wilson, of the present fixtures, there still is an inclination in some baseball quarters to view athletes obtained in the annual lottery as almost certain failures, the contention being that if they had any real value they would have been purchased in advance.

The impressive performance given by Pitcher Curt Davis, of the Phils, in stopping the Pirates' winning streak this week, draws attention to the fact that the year's draftee crop on the whole has been quite successful. Davis, who was drafted from San Francisco, is only one exhibit. Attesting the class of the field in general, no fewer than 10 of the 11 players who were drafted by big league clubs last fall are still sticking in the majors, the only one sent back being Fresco Thompson.

PIRATES GET GOOD CATCHER IN LOTTERY

The Pittsburgh club was among the fortunate ones to make a good pick-up in the draft. Catcher Art Veltman, obtained from Oakland, promises to be a serviceable acquisition. He has not seen much service yet, but showed to advantage in his few chances, will be a great help during the incapacitation of Earl Grace, and is viewed by Manager Gibson as having the makings of an excellent receiver. Another drafted catcher to win a job is Ray Berres, who came up from Birmingham to crowd Clyde Sukeforth out of the No. 2 place on the Dodger backstopping corps.

Art Veltman

Brooklyn's draft luck did not end with the drawing of Berres, as the same club grabbed two other helpful utility players in Infielder Jim Bucher, from Columbus, and Outfielder Glenn Chapman, from Indianapolis. Second Baseman Irvine Jeffries, now holding down a regular berth with the Phils, was drafted by the Reds from St. Paul. The Quakers are carrying another draftee in Pitcher George Darrow from Galveston. All three men drafted by the American League have made good on their jobs to date—First Baseman Eddie Morgan, whom the Red Sox got from New Orleans; Outfielder Ray Holland, obtained by the Indians from Minneapolis, and Pitcher Buck Newsom, who went to the Browns from Los Angeles.

TROUBLESOME BRAVES HERE TOMORROW

Following the Phils into town to open a three-day engagement with Pittsburgh's third Sunday game tomorrow will come Bill McKechnie and his Boston Braves. The coming of the Braves always is a sign of trouble for the Bucs. The Hubites almost invariably prove stumbling blocks to the Rovers. Last year, McKechnie's band won six out of 11 games here and seven out of 11 in Boston, or 13 out of 22 for the season.

This spring the Bostonese threaten to be as bothersome as ever. It won't look like the same club with Rabbit Maranville missing, but McKechnie has plugged the hole at second base by acquiring Marty McManus, former American League player and manager. The only other new players are Outfielder Rupert Thompson, who broke in last fall, and Pitcher Dick Barrett, formerly with the A's under the name of Oliver.

M'KECHNIE MAY USE TWO SOUTHPAWS

McKechnie may shoot his two southpaw pitchers, Ed Brandt and Tom Zachary, against the Pirates in the first two games. Brandt has won 13 and lost 10 games in competition with the locals, and Zachary has won 10 and lost 6. The records of the other Boston regulars against Pittsburgh show that Fred Frankhouse has won 7 and lost 3, Ben Cantwell has won 7 and lost 7, Huck Betts has won 7 and lost 8, and Bob Smith has won 13 and lost 21.

Heinie Meine has done the most successful pitching for Pittsburgh against Boston, winning 13 games while losing only 4. Red Lucas, while with Cincinnati, won 22 games from the Braves against 10 defeats. Larry French has won 9 and lost 10. Bill Swift has won 4 and lost 3, Leon Chagnon has won 2 and lost 2, and Waite Hoyt has lost six in a row.

ALLISON MAY MISS EARLY CUP ROUNDS

The sprained ankle suffered by Wilmer Allison while playing doubles with John Van Ryan against Frank Shields and Lester Stoefen in an invitation tennis tournament at Washington not only will keep the country's No. 2 ranking player out of the practice sessions of the Davis Cup team, but may render him unavailable for the elimination cup rounds against Canada and Mexico. Unless an alternate is named for Allison, Capt. Dick Williams will have only four players to consider for his team, these being Frank Shields, George Lott, Stoefen and Sidney Wood.

Wilmer Allison

Under the circumstances, it will not be surprising if the Davis Cup committee resumes its efforts to persuade Van Ryn, who teamed successfully with Lott in the doubles last year, to leave his business duties for a time and try out for the team again. And it is not altogether unlikely, in view of the new emergency, that Cliff Sutter, Bitsy Grant and others in the first flight of American tennis may get a call to action.

FRENCH READY TO OPPOSE PHILS TODAY

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Our Pirates were less than half a game from the top today as they made ready to cross bats with Jimmy Wilson's stubborn Phillies in the last game of an exciting series. The defeat of the Cubs while the Buccos were winning a 10-inning struggle with the Quakers yesterday put the Buccos in a very desirable position.

The World Champion Giants, meantime, appear to have floundered on the western rocks. Many a baseball man had figured that the worm would turn for the New Yorkers as soon as they pulled away from the Atlantic Seaboard, where they were playing a lot of "pushovers."

BUCS START PUSH

The Buccos gave the Giants the first big push in a downward direction as they defeated them twice in three battles. The New Yorkers were able to take two out of three as they loitered in Cincinnati, but their stay in St. Louis has been anything but pleasant. Frank Frisch's hustlers have sideswiped the Giant machine three times in succession.

Memphis Bill's club, therefore, has lost four games in succession and has been on the crying end of six decisions coming from nine battels on the very hostile soil of the West.

Manager Gibson stated last night he would send Larry French to the firing line against the Quakers this afternoon. The Phillies will swing into action behind Big Ed Holley, a right good righthander.

Bill McKechnie and his Boston Braves will be the Sunday attraction at the Oakland Orchard tomorrow. The Tribe will be in

BRITONS' TASK SEEMINGLY HOPELESS

WALKER CUP HISTORY

NEW YORK, May 12.—(INS.)—Following is the record of previous Walker Cup matches:
1922—United States 8, Great Britain 4.
1153—United States 6, Great Britain 5, one match halved.
1924—United States 9, Great Britain 3.
1926—United States 6, Great Britain 5, one match halved.
1928—United States 11, Great Britain 1.
1930—United States 10, Great Britain, 2.
1932—United States 9, Great Britain 1, three matches halved.

By T. C. WATSON
International News Service.

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, May 12.—Needing less than four victories in the eight matches to bring the Walker Cup back home with them, America's amateur golfers appeared to have made absolutely certain of the assignment today by taking the lead over Great Britain in five matches at the close of 18 blustery, wet holes. Two others saw England leading by a single hole, while one finished all square.

Prospects of victory were heightened when the first four matches to finish saw the American flag on top. In two of these, it was so far on top that it seemed improbable that the British could ever haul it down again.

In one of them, Francis Ouimet, American team captain, still smarting under yesterday's defeat in the foursomes, ran up a colossal lead of 6 up on Leonard Crawley. In the other, Lawson Little, San Francisco, playing magnificent golf in the wind and driving rain, shot a 73 to finish 4 up on Cyril Tolley, former British champion.

GOODMAN IN LEAD

Moreover, Johnny Goodman, American open champion, again proved the trail-blazer for the invaders by leading the Hon. Michael Scott, British champion, home by 2 up in the opening match, while Champion George Dunlap was 1 up on Jack McLean. So was Jack Westland, Chicago, on Eric McRuvie.

Then there was a bloodless tie between Gus Moreland, Dallas, Tex., and Sam McKinlay, leaving England the doubtful distinction of single-hold margins in the remaining two matches. In these, Tony Torrance, former British bellwether, led Max Marston, once an American champion, by 1 up, and Eric Fiddian led Johnny Fischer, Detroit, by the same margin.

So England, already beaten all seven times in previous series, seemed even more hopeless than she did yesterday when America led the two-ball foursome—England's favorite game—by 3 to 1.

RAIN, WIND HANDICAPS

It wasn't quite a day for golf, what with the wind and rain and St. Andrews' famous back-nine holes roaring in glee at the distress of its victims. Yet W. Lawson Little seemed quite as much at home as he did in yesterday's tranquil weather. He shot a remarkable 73, where some of the scores were in the high 70's and others in the low 80's.

The cards for the morning round:

CAVALCADE AND HIGH QUEST FAVORITES IN PREAKNESS

SMALL FIELD LIKELY FOR RICH RACE

BALTIMORE, May 12.—(AP.)—Amid surroundings that belied his regal standing among the three-year-olds of the turf, Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's Cavalcade awaited today the bugle calling him to the post for the forty-fourth running of the $25,000 Preakness.

The nervousness the Kentucky Derby winner displayed upon his arrival from New York yesterday had gone and he was ready to add the famous Pimlico classic and its purse of nearly $25,000 to his triumphs.

There was still some question whether Trainer Bob Smith would send Cavalcade to the post, but there was no question as to his fitness. Every indication was, however, that the jovial trainer for Mrs. Sloane's Brookmeade stable would decide to saddle, not only his famous Derby winner, but the speedy High Quest, with the idea of attempting to finish one and two.

Smith also entered Anarchy, a lesser light of the stable, but at the last minute decided to leave him at home and stake all on the two colts, which have yet to taste defeat this year.

Six other 3-year-olds, three of them Derby starters, have been selected to dispute the claim of the Sloane stars to supremacy among the division. Not more than five and probably only four, however, are expected to face Starter James Milton at about 5 p. m.

Of the half dozen nominees, Discovery, the colt for which 21-year-old Alfred G. Vanderbilt paid $20,000, and Mrs. Frank J. Heller's great money performer, Agrarian, were rated the best chance of turning back the Brookmeade colts.

The entry of Cavalcade and High Quest was quoted at 4 to 5 in the early wagering, while Discovery was quoted at 4 to 1, and Agrarian at 8 to 1. Then followed Mrs. P. A. Carreaud's Time Supply, a product of winter racing; Mrs. Payne Whitney's Spy Hill, sixth in the Derby; Norman Church's Riskulus from California, and the George Willing, Jr., Swiftport.

Catcher Breaks Fingers In Debut

LOU LEGGETT, BOSTON RED SOX CATCHER, IN DUGOUT AFTER SUFFERING INJURY WHICH KILLED BIG CHANCE

His first opportunity to start a game in the major leagues turned out tragically for Catcher Lou Leggett when he had two fingers broken and had to leave the battle. International News Photograph Service picture shows him sobbing with pain on the bench as he holds up the injured fingers. Note the blood on the floor of the dugout. A tough break for a youngster, eh?

PARKS, ELDRED COP EXHIBITION

By TOM BIRKS

Paul Runyan came and saw, but he did not conquer. The little White Plains, N. Y., professional, top money winner during the recent winter tournament campaign, and Emil Loeffler, Oakmont pro, were defeated in a four-ball, best-ball exhibition over the Highland Country Club links yesterday by Vince Eldred, Highland pro and West Penn open champion, and Sam Parks, Jr., of South Hills, 1 up. The match ended on the twentieth hole.

A gallery estimated at 500 turned out to see the young White Plains star braving a cold, biting wind to see the fireworks. Runyan, who flashed some pretty good golf, failed to steal the thunder from the local boys. Parks, Eldred and Loeffler, exhibiting golf at times that sent the gallery into cheers.

The young South Hills mentor turned in the best medal score of the day, a 68, three under par. Eldred, a great money player, put together a 33-36—69, while Runyan, visibly disturbed by the hills of Wellington Heights, had a 71. Loeffler picked up on a couple of holes, so his medal score could not be recorded.

The best ball for the 18 holes of play was that of Parks and Eldred, 32-34—66. Runyan and Loeffler had 33-33—66. On the playoff, Runyan took a five when he three putted the nineteenth green, while the others took fours.

Runyan made a very favorable impression. He has a peculiar style off the tee, a little unorthodox.

Loeffler gave the gallery a thrill when he scored an eagle on the long fourth hole, while Eldred's brilliant drive and iron on the seventh finishing with a long putt for a birdie four, also gave the gallery something to talk over. The cards:

Norwin High School lodged a protest following its defeat in an Interscholastic Golf Conference match with McKeesport yesterday. Coach Fisher, of Norwin, claiming that the match between Russin, of McKeesport, and Rain, of Norwin, was affected when Russin removed an object from the course before making a shot. McKeesport won the match, 10 to 6.

Other Conference matches, save the Oliver-Allegheny Vocational duel in Section I, were more or less one-sided affairs. Oliver nosed out Vocational, 8 to 7. Kiski, defending champion, blanked Latrobe, 15 to 0.

YOUNG TERRY WINS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., May 12.—(AP.)—Young Terry, Trenton, N. J., middleweight, held an 10-round decision over Vean Whitehead, of Santa Monica, today, as the result of hard punching in the closing rounds of the bout here last night. The Californian went down four times in the first round, one of which was a five count. Terry was deemed for no count in the first.

TENNIS PARTY ON TODAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Nearly a score of teams will square off at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the preliminary contesting of the special men's doubles tourney that features the competitive side of the annual Pittsburgh Tennis Association "Tennis Night" get-together at the Pittsburgh Golf Club this evening. Pairings for the event, originally listed to be made yesterday, will not be drawn until immediately prior to the start of festivities.

Employing the facilities offered by both the indoor and the outdoor rectangles of the P. G. C., the committee aims to bring the jousting down to the semi-finals before time for the serving of the customary buffet supper, slated to be spread upon the boards at 7 p. m.

Wash-Jeff will stage its second local appearance of the campaign this afternoon as the clever President net aggregation seeks to repeat on the Bluff its home triumph of last Saturday over the Dukes.

Yesterday saw relative quiet on the district racquet front, though Grove City edged out Allegheny, 5-4, in a varsity fray on the Grover lot, and Arnold School trimmed Duke Preps, 4-1, in the playoff of a previously postponed interscholastic Conference tussle.

The champion Mt. Lebanon tennis team nosed out the Pitt freshmen on the Pitt courts yesterday afternoon, 4 to 3.

STOGIES WIN LONG FRAY

Charleston's Senators made a game effort to carve out a victory over the Wheeling Stogies in their Mid-Atlantic League tussle at Charleston yesterday, the Senators coming from behind four times to effect a tie, but finally blew up in the fourteenth inning and the Stogies won, 8 to 4.

In another extra heat battle, Dayton's Ducks opened their home season by nosing out Zanesville, 6 to 5, in 10 innings. Wolf, on the mound for Dayton, drove in the winning run with a single in the tenth.

At Beckley, Johnstown lost to the Black Knights, 6 to 5, in a nip-and-tuck battle, while Huntington had an easy time in crushing Springfield at Springfield, 12 to 2.

SALVESON RELEASED

ST. LOUIS, May 12.—(AP.)—Pitcher Jack Salveson has been released by Manager Bill Terry, of the New York Giants, to Montreal of the International League, subject to 24-hour recall. The release left the Giants with one man over the player limit, and it was rumored Outfielder Leiber would be sent away.

FRENCH READY FOR QUAKERS

town for three contests with the Pirates. The Pittsburgh management expects a big turnout for the contests of today and tomorrow will begin at 3 o'clock.

Gus Suhr was the hero of the Pirate camp this morning owing to a tenth-inning homer that flashed off the Dutchman's big bat to give the Buccos a 6-to-4 victory over the Quakers yesterday. Suhr drove one of Phil Collins' pitches into the right-field stands with Arky Vaughan on the sacks.

The Pirates narrowly missed a defeat. Had Recruit Art Ruble held onto L. Waner's fly in the ninth inning, the Oaklanders would have been defeated. The youngster had a difficult task in grabbing the ball, and missed it after having the rocket squarely in his hands. Pie Traynor went over with the tying run.

The ailing captain of the Buccos batted for Catcher Tom Padden in the ninth. Collins tried to fool Pie with a slow pitch, but Traynor slapped the offering against the leftfield wall. Jensen batted for Birkofer and grounded out as Traynor moved ahead. Then came the misplay in the outfield.

Waite Hoyt pitched one round for the Pirates and received credit for the success.

Southpaw Roy Hansen pitched against Birkofer for six frames. The Pirate lefthander yielded only four hits in six innings, but weakened in the seventh when the enemy rode to a tie.

CHILLYSAUCE

Pie Traynor was a speaker at the Oldtimers' gathering in East Pittsburgh last night. The Pirate captain was given a tremendous ovation by the workers of the thriving community. The meeting was called for the purpose of furthering all kinds of sports in and around East Pittsburgh.

Traynor's talk was enjoyed by the assemblage, as were the addresses of Joe Bach, Duquesne University football coach; Dr. H. C. Carlson, coach of the Pitt basketeers; Johnny Reed, North Braddock mentor; Mack McTiernan, the boxer; Chester Smith, the master of ceremonies, and Johnny Coleman, athletic director of East Pittsburgh High School, who presided at the meeting.

A big argument involving the destination of Gus Suhr's victory homer raged after the Pirate-Philly contest of yesterday. The winning four-backer was said by many to have gone through the right field screen and into the stands. Players on the Pirate bench figured this might have happened and other observers got the same slant, but the lads in the bullpen, who had the best view, said the rocket cleared the top meshes and fell among the women seated in that section.

Mt. Oliver Nine Defeats Dormont

The first upset of the City League campaign was recorded last evening as the newly formed Mt. Oliver tossers defeated the crack Dormont nine, 3 to 0, Schmidt limiting the South Hillsmen to four scattered hits.

Homewood moved into first place in the league standing by walloping Beltzhoover, 9 to 4, in a free hitting game at Homewood. Gus Otey kept Beltzhoover's 10 hits well scattered. The score by innings:

	R.	H.	E.
Dormont	0	4	1
Mt. Oliver	3	6	0

Batteries—Knetzer and Lees; Schmidt and Lacher.

	R.	H.	E.
Beltzhooxer	4	10	3
Homewood	9	15	1

Batteries—Mochel and Lentz; Otey and Latusick.

The Homestead Grays had a field day at the expense of the J. J. Vaughans in an exhibition game, winning 20 to 5.

CASEY, LITTLE AID AT PITT GRID CLINIC

By JESS CARVER

The University of Pittsburgh's third annual football clinic is doing a two-a-day in the Pitt Stadium today. Indications point to a packed house, for a clinic at least, sitting in on the show.

A turnout of more than 1,000 high school coaches and players was expected, coming from high schools in Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, Maryland, New Jersey, Massachusetts and Kentucky.

CASEY, LITTLE HERE

It is sort of a three-ring affair, with a trio of nationally known college mentors cracking the whip and one of the outstanding high school mentors of the land furnishing additional fireworks. Assisting Coach Jock Sutherland, of Pitt, with the performance will be Lou Little, Columbia University's famous mentor, and Eddie Casey, of Harvard. The scholastic coach is Paul Jenkins, of the Ashland (Ky.) High School, who has lost exactly one game in six years.

The clinic got under way at 9 o'clock this morning, with exhibitions of offensive and defensive football. This show was scheduled to be completed at noon time, to be followed by a luncheon at Webster Hall, at which the visiting coaches were to give talks.

Coach Little's subject was "Deception;" Coach Casey's "Forward Passing," and Coach Sutherland's "Linemen in the Interference and Some Phases of the Defense Used Against Double and Single Wing Back Formations." Coach Jenkins had "High School Problems" for his theme.

Practical football was to be resumed at 2 o'clock, with continued exhibitions of the right and proper method of conduct for ends, guards and backs. At 3:15, the centers, tackles and backs were to hold the center of the spotlight.

ASSISTANTS AID

The Panther varsity squad will be used for demonstration purposes.

The following scholastic coaches were in attendance:

E. H. Kressling, Port Jefferson, N. Y.; R. F. Crowley, Carthage, N. Y.; Everett Brinkman, Wheeling, W. Va.; Carl Miller, Benwood, W. Va.; Reed Clark, Wellsburg, W. Va.; Paul Roble, Moundsville, W. Va.; Paul Brown, Massillon, O.; A. R. Styskal, Leetonia, O.; N. W. Lansing, Raven, Youngstown, O.; F. E. Loucks, Martins Ferry, O.; Harold Treece, Defiance, O.; C. Q. Weirich, H. T. McKee, South Union; Harold Stackhouse, Kittanning.

The Pitt varsity and freshmen track and field squads are in Morgantown today for dual engagements with West Virginia. Both the Panther varsity and Cub teams are top heavy favorites to win, the varsity by plenty of points.

Tech's golfers engage Wash-Jeff at the Field Club this morning.

Arizmendi Wins In Tourney Bout

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP.)—Baby Arizmendi, brown fighting fury from Mexico by way of California, last night ripped a 10-round decision out of the body of pale Al Roth, best of the New York featherweights, in the 10-round feature of the semi-finals of a tournament designed to crown Kid Chocolate's title successor in New York state.

The Private Papers of a Reporter

CHICAGO—The lineup in New York's police headquarters isn't as exciting as the show-up, as it is called in Chicago. In Manhattan, fraudsters, the criminals and the others packed up for a looking-over—are seen only by detectives and the others gendarmes. In Chicago—besides the coppers sitting out front—victims of stick-ups and robberies, etc., are the chief spectators. And as an arrested person walks on the stage under the blinding lights—a woman in the victims' pews is likely to scream hysterically and yell: "That's the man—that's the one who did it!" The shudders shiver all over you when such a scene happens in the impromptu manner. Damon Runyon, who was in town for a day or so, went with me the other night (they have the show-up at nights here), and among other interesting observations is the machine that puts the "finger" on you—if you have a hidden knife, razor blade or pistol on your person. Often a criminal, even after a thorough search, goes mad with a knife planked in his garter, or a tiny razor blade hidden in the hat band . . . Before the criminal is fingerprinted—he passes a brass-railed dock . . . He stands there fully dressed, turns around and an officer runs a gadget over every part of him . . . When a bell rings—that's the tip-off—that where the gadget prompted the bell to gong—they may find the hidden weapon . . . You'd think such a machine would be in every police station . . . Chicago has the only one.

It was exciting looking over all the stuff they collected on Mr. Dillinger, too . . . The machine guns, bullets, shirts, hats and other doodads he and his pals had to leave behind them when they left hurriedly . . . And, another item that impressed me here . . . The fire wagons raced faster and make more shrieking siren noises than those in New York . . . And almost every other minute your ears are deafened by the screaming sirens on the police cars . . . Wonder why the Chicago detective sedans feature the fact on the sides that they are police cars? . . . I don't mean the tiny roadsters in which uniformed cops cruise . . . I mean the touring cars in which plainclothes men meander . . . Seems to me that with police written all over their machines—that's a heck of a way to trap anybody . . . What a strange meeting that was just now . . . A nice middle-aged man and his wife said: "Hello," and handed me a card—on the back of which was written: "It is nice to meet you" . . . I turned over the card to read his name and it was mine! Poor fellow . . . His middle initial is "H," however—and that, I trust, keeps him from letting me get him into trouble.

Melvin Purvis, head of the Department of Justice in Chicago, who is heading the local group looking for John—is so young . . . As a matter of fact—every "G" man I've met to date is this side of 30—or so they appear . . . Haven't seen one yet that looked like he was representing "Mr. Whiskers," either . . . Handed me a laugh, too—every time they refer to Dillinger—it is "What's new on John?" . . . I'm more convinced than ever now that Insull isn't hated here . . . James Kilgallen, the ace reporter, assigned 15,000 miles by Universal Service to cover Insull, was in and when he spoke kindly of the old gent—people present seemed pleased . . . Kilgallen is here with a shirt on his back and one in a package!

Among the other personable and exciting men about town is State's Attorney Courtney—a handsome six-footer—who resembles a man from Oklahoma . . . He was a winner in a blazing election—and the local baddies wish he weren't . . . The legend goes on—when the outlaws feared he would walk in with all honors—that they "got to him" offering $10,000 and more—from this and that mob—"for campaign expenses" . . . He sent it all back, saying: "If I win—you boys will need it most—there won't be any room for both of us in Chicago!" . . . They tell me that, at the beginning of the campaign, Courtney didn't have a chance—as they imagined . . . And that the one dramatic remark that won over the voters was this . . . "I can promise you people nothing more than this. If I am elected—within thirty seconds after—all underworld connections will be severed with the State's Attorney's office" . . . The editor here state that he made good on the agreement . . . One of the first good things he did was to appoint Capt. Dan Gilbert—chief investigator of Cook County . . . Courtney operates this way . . . A mobster is picked up at night for toting a pistol . . . Before he was elected such lads were freed immediately by way of "the fix" with some judge . . . When a pistol carrier is now pinched—Courtney is notified . . . He digs up his record, if any—and a few moments before the case comes up next morning, he goes into the court and says to the judge: "You Honor, this man has a record—here it is. I know his influence has been working overnight. This case should be tried on its merit. He's a dangerous person—send him to jail" . . . And invariably he goes to jail . . . Because State's Attorney Courtney invites the press to court! . . . The papers represent the public—and the papers are with Courtney, as are the cops—which is the chief reason Chicago can hold its head high, again.

* * *

It is amazing what a tiny paragraph can do to win over oodles of friends . . . My paper here has assigned me to do a preview of the World's Fair . . . Among other observations that caught my orbs was the new Italian village—with a leaning tower, a replica of the one in Pelcona, Italy, and so on . . . So what happened? . . . So the appreciative Italian people of Chicago and environs sent beautiful displays of posies . . . In New York people are too concerned with themselves to go to the bother—of saying thanks . . . Wish I could promote getting into one of the cars when a Dillinger tip comes in . . . I take that back . . . It will be easier reading about it . . . Pretty funny quip Bernie pulled on his broadcast Tuesday night . . . He was singing Gordon and Revel's ditty: "In the Good Old Winter Time" . . . And he ad libbed: "Yes, indeedy—in the good old Winter time—you get roller skates—ice skates—and Winchell skates, which cut no ice!"—Veddy veddy fuddy . . . He pulled it—just the way I wrote it . . . Wonder why they call the downtown section of Chicago the Loop? . . . When it is square.

Witty Lines Spice New Comedy

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Another young Pittsburgh author made her bow last night when Rosemary Casey's comedy, "Love Is Not Important," was presented at the Nixon Theater by a group of young players from Carnegie Tech Drama School, who call themselves the Bacchanalians and certainly played with enough spirit to satisfy Bacchus.

Mr. Seibel

The chief charm of the comedy lies in its witty lines, though there are some amusing situations to hang them on. The witty lines reached their mark chiefly because Mary Elizabeth Rowles, as the actress in love with a playwright, put them across the footlights with unfailing accuracy and a rich sense of humor.

Seven other people in the cast helped the good work along by fine team play. George McCalmon as the playwright and William Beal as a business man, rivals for the affections of the heroine, untied the knot in the final scene with as thrilling a catch-as-catch-can battle as ever staged by the Greek Strangler and the Ethiopian Giant. Jane Francy was deliciously arty as a motion picture star, and Rosemary Carver played the sister breezily. Janet Patrick, Rosalind Wikander and Carl Doner filled the other roles in adequate fashion.

The comedy is neatly put together, and has a second act that moves with swift invention. The first act is meager and the last act is drawn out with that witty dialogue that does not permit it to drag, although the playwright and the sister develop unsuspected cleverness in unraveling the plot. But when all is said, it's a bright and ingenious comedy woven of gossamer, which the direction of Chester Wallace and the fine performance of Miss Rowles filled with sparkle and life.

"Love Is Not Important" will be repeated tonight in the Nixon.

Meanwhile they are preparing the closing play of the season out at the Tech Drama School. John Galsworthy's "The Skin Game," which calls to mind the visit Galsworthy and his wife paid to the Institute in 1919. Monday, May 21, will see the opening performance of this Galsworthy comedy.

The following night, May 22, the Irene Kaufmann Settlement Players will revive the world's most popular drama—not "Hamlet," but "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

An impressive religious drama based on the life of St. Francis of Assisi will be staged tomorrow afternoon and evening at St. Augustine's auditorium, Butler street, by students of St. Fidelis Seminary, using one of Laurence Housman's little plays as the fifth act. Joseph Tachovsky, of Beaver Falls, will act St. Francis, and there is a cast of 42.

Bing Crosby Starred In Penn Film

By MICHAEL SHAW

Bing Crosby's first full-length starring vehicle, "We're Not Dressing," opened yesterday in the Penn.

It is another one of those desert island thrillers, faintly amusing and entirely implausible. Due credit for the basic idea is given Barrie when Miss Carole Lombard says to Mr. Crosby, "Why, you're just like that man in the play—Crichton, wasn't it?"

But don't let that fool you. This picture is no more like "The Admirable Crichton" than Cecil deMille's "Male and Female" was.

Blank-faced Mr. Crosby devotes himself largely to his crooning, essaying only a dash of comedy and an even tinier dash of romantic acting. He croons almost constantly—to his fellow sailors on rich Miss Lombard's yacht, in Miss Lombard's ear, and even when adrift in a tub on the broad Pacific.

If you're not an admirer of Mr. Crosby's, you may find this uninterrupted song rather annoying. Yesterday's audiences, however, must have been largely made up of Crosby fans, for his efforts were greeted with obvious rapture, and even with applause.

There were also roars of laughter at the antics of a veritable battalion of comedians, including George Burns and Gracie Allen, Ethel Merman, Leon Errol and a pet bear.

Miss Lombard, in possibly her most ungrateful role, is cruising with a party composed of Miss Merman, Mr. Errol and two Georgian princes when the inevitable shipwreck occurs. All are cast ashore on a tropical island along with Sailor Crosby, who, of course, takes charge, building shelters, cooking clams and singing love lyrics to Miss Lombard.

On another part of the island are Mr. Burns and his wife, Gracie. Mr. Burns being a scientist hunting flora and fauna. ("What station are they on?" asks Gracie). Miss Lombard encounters them, gets some dresses for herself and a chest of tools for Mr. Crosby.

The sailor is well on his way to becoming a "king in Babylon" when rescuers take off the castaways. It seems for a time as if the heiress has been trifling with Mr. Crosby's affections, and he is pretty bitter about it. But all ends well.

The score, by Gordon and Revel, includes the popular tune, "Love Thy Neighbor," and a burlesque rhumba, "It's a New Spanish Custom," done with great vivacity by Mr. Errol and Miss Merman. Norman Taurog directed.

A Mickey Mouse, a Charley Chase comedy and a Hearst Metrotone Newsreel are among the short subjects completing the bill.

LoveGamble In Stanley Movie

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

The modern idea of giving the gentler sex full leeway in the matter of being unconventional is carried out with some degree of entertainment value in "Gambling Lady," photoplay in the Stanley, in which Barbara Stanwyck is a professional gambler. In the wild days of the Old West there were some dames of that calling, we believe, but we are sure there were not any as pretty and charming as Miss Stanwyck.

The story, although rather cheap, and lacking in novelty despite the showing of the operation of "hold-outs" and other mechanical contrivances whereby crooked gamsters get the edge on suckers, is rather diverting, even if it is pure hokum. It even rises to mild comedy at one point when our square-shooting heroine trims a snooty rival, a society gal, of all her jewels as punishment for a sneer.

The central role in "Gambling Lady" is that of the daughter of a gambler who has inherited her father's skill at cards and decides that is the way she will make her living when he "walks out on her," as naively expressed in a suicide note that appraises her he is no more. And the gambling idea is predominant in everything she does. She even cuts the cards with her sweetheart's father, to decide whether she will be a bride or not, and that, incidentally, is one of the silliest points in the picture.

Eventually one of her gambling friends is murdered, and circumstances make her husband appear to be guilty of the crime. She discovers a perfect alibi in her rival's home but the gal she trimmed is a barrainer, so she very bokily goes through with that sacrificial stuff, so there can be a melodramatic reconciliation.

It's clean stuff, however, and Miss Stanwyck wears a halo of honesty throughout, and there is a nice characterization on her part. Joel McCrea plays the romantic male lead, and other well-acted parts are in the hands of Pat O'Brien, a gambler, and C. Aubrey Smith, as Joel's rich and snorty dad.

Johnny Smith Goes on the Air

JOHNNY SMITH, formerly a trouper in small time vaudeville, made his debut over the air waves the other night. May I present you with a few reactions? . . .

* * *

AN ASPIRING RADIO ARTIST: "A brand new program with Johnny Smith." Whoever heard of Johnny Smith? Well, that's the way things go. They put on some ham that nobody knows—and a talent like mine goes to waste.

It only goes to prove that people nowadays don't know anything about Art. But I'm not going to worry. He's just a bum comedian, while I still have my Art.

My Art is all I need. My Art—and a little rent money.

SMITH'S BROTHER: Why don't you tune in on Johnny? What'zat? You wanna listen to what? The Hi-de-ho Troubador? Now listen, Mamie, my own brother is broadcastin' tonight. My own brother, get that? And you wanna listen to some dopey crooner pollutin' the air!

Get away from that machine, Mamie. I'm gonna tune in on Johnny. Ain't you got no family pride, or nothin'? Ain't you got no finer feelin's? Don'tcha realize that Johnny is just like my own self, and that I love him?

Besides, he might ask me if I heard him, and what would I say then? That would put me in a fine spot when I wanted to borrow a couple of bucks.

* * *

MRS. JOHNNY SMITH: He's going on now. Thank goodness! That's all I've heard for the past two weeks.

He's going to be worse than ever after this. I suppose a lot of dizzy dames will be sending him fan letters. And me—why I've had to listen to his bum gags and silly chatter for 10 years.

If you ask me, I'm the one who should get the fan letters!

SIXTEEN VAUDEVILLE ACTORS: Know him? Know Johnny Smith? Say, don't make me laugh. Listen, this is strictly confidential, but I'm telling you on the level. I'm the bird that taught Johnny Smith everything he knows today. . . .

* * *

AN AUTOMOBILE SALESMAN: Be sure I get up on time tomorrow morning, Peggy. I gotta get down early to the hotel where this Smith guy is stopping.

I wanna get rid of the lavender car with the pink stripes.

* * *

SIX MEN IN SIX BROADWAY CAFES: It's the breaks—that's all.

Say, you know what I can do. Suppose I got a break like that, what then? You said it! You bet I'd knock 'em cold. You bet I would.

* * *

JOHNNY SMITH: Listen to 'em laughin'! Listen to that applause! All my life I've been waitin' for somethin' like this to happen. And here it is at last!

I'm not Johnny Smith, the ham, any more. I'm Johnny Smith, the new radio star! Hundreds and thousands of people heard me tonight. Maybe millions! Imagine that. Millions of people hangin' on every word I give out. And they'll all be talkin' about me tomorrow.

Well, if you figure it all out, it's just about what I deserve. I worked hard, and I educated myself from the beginnin'. And say, that's a swell line to use when them radio magazines start to interview me.

When they ask me how come I'm so successful, I'll just tell 'em that education is the thing what done it . . .

SEVERAL THOUSANDS OF LISTENERS-IN: For heaven's sake, tune that monkey out and see if you can't get something decent for a change. Is he lousy! . . .

Fun, Dancing In Pitt

By ZORA D. UNKOVISH

"There are scandals of all sorts in the King's Court," quoths a pretty maid in the Pitt as she introduces "The King's Scandals," but she would speak more truly if she told of jokes and some very well done dancing.

If it's English wit you want, with a jolly smooth ease, Val and Ernie Stanton, sporting toppers, will smartly tell you a joke whose point is, then again is not (just how you look at the matter) missing. Their's is a polite and finished form of banter which Marian Bolett and Gil Lamb toss aside for some sharply pointed clowning.

Marian and Gil—if she stands on her toes she might come within talking distance of him—bounce over the stage in a series of funnily startling dance interpretations. If your preference leans to tapping, and tapping only, you'll get a full supply in the stepping sextet who perform individually and collectively.

For beauty there is the study in gold by Frankie and Clem, executed with a grace delightful to watch. Since, in the modern revue, extremes are the order of the day, "The Mysterious Fan Dancer" offers a surprise manipulation of the customary fans which might be—well—a great deal less insinuative.

In "Three on a Honeymoon," Zasu Pitts saves Sally Eilers and Charles Starrett from making too humdrum the story of a spoiled darling of the rich getting her man, even if he doesn't want to be caught. Zasu gets into all the possible scrapes while Sally and Charles straighten their own, and a friend's, love affairs aboard a Mediterranean cruiser.

Lowell Sherman, who usually has sly gestures up his verra subtle directorial sleeve, has turned the comedy-drama tables on an ancient costume ditty, "The School for Scandal," by Richard Brinsley Sheridan, and will do the thing in modern dress for Universal. And it wouldn't surprise me a bit to hear of Lowell again donning the grease paint for a nice role.

Regent Double Bill Has Barthelmess

"A Modern Hero," with Richard Barthelmess and Jean Muir in the principal roles, and "The Ninth Guest," a mystery melodrama, comprise the double feature bill in the Regent. In "A Modern Hero" Barthelmess begins as a circus performer who eventually becomes a rich man, and then a poor one again, through the machinations of that ol' debbil, Wall Street. Between times are several affairs of heart. "The Ninth Guest" is the film version of a stage play once seen here in stock, in which guests at a strange party meet death and then a reporter discovers the cause. Donald Cook and Geneve Tobin have leading roles.

STEEL OUTPUT CONTINUES UPWARD

By B. F. HUTTY

Consumption of steel has stopped increasing, but production continues to increase on account of stocking. Production of ingots this week may be estimated at 61 per cent of capacity, against 58 per cent last week and about 53 per cent four weeks ago.

Before the depression March was usually the high month in production, though occasionally April took the position. The seasonal peak would naturally be somewhat later in these times on account of buyers being comparatively slow.

The first seasonal decrease in steel consumption has been seen in the automobile industry. Production of cars and trucks, United States and Canada, in April is estimated at 370,000, only 6 per cent above March, and this month is expected to run slightly less with a marked decrease in June. Deliveries of steel to the industry will probably increase on account of stocking.

Assuming that the peak rate of steel consumption represented 85 per cent of steel making capacity and prevailed two weeks ago, it will be possible soon to estimate the total tonnage of steel to be stocked by June 30, that being the last day on which steel can be shipped under contracts made before the recent price advances. Consumption and production can be estimated week by week and the cumulative total of the differences will represent approximately the stocks.

STOCKING A FACTOR

Ingot production may begin declining as early as the week ending June 16 as with some products about three weeks elapse from production of the steel to shipment of the finished material. After June there will be a sharp decrease while increase should begin late in July.

Rates of steel production now and in the next few weeks contain the fictitious element of stocking and later during liquidation the producing rates will be cut the other way as a measure of steel consumption. It is merely an incident that this week's 61 per cent rate just equals the peak rate last summer, when there was much more stocking than now, especially so because then there was stocking of steel manufactures also. Nor is it entirely in point to note that present production is above all other rates since June, 1930, for the estimated rate of consumption is only the best since March, 1931, when production presumably represented merely consumption.

A rough guess now would be that average consumption from May 1 to September 1 will be the equivalent of steel production at 50 per cent throughout the period, but substantial improvement in general business, particularly in capital goods, would make consumption heavier than this estimate.

TIN MILL RATE OFF

April shipments of the Steel Corporation were reported at 643,609 tons, representing 9.3 per cent increase over March, but 18.1 per cent increase in daily rate as April had two less working days than March. It is curious that the increase was greater than the increase in total ingot production of the industry, the daily rate in ingots having increased only 13.3 per cent. Ordinarily steel would accumulate in mills when production was rising, and thus a policy of liquidating inventories is indicated.

Production of rails and track material in the next three months will account for engagement of fully 5 per cent of total steel making capacity, in addition to which there is car and other material.

Tin plate mills averaged about 75 per cent of full working time this week, after nine weeks at fully 60 per cent, and some further decrease is expected for the next few weeks. Production in the year to date has been much heavier than expected, especially so in view of the stocking of tin plate and cans late in the old year to take advantage of old prices.

Heavy melting steel scrap is quotable at around $12.75 to $13.25, representing a decline of $1.25 in three weeks, but the market is not well defined. Buying has been much below expectations, mills apparently pursuing a rigid policy of liquidating their stocks.

B. & O. REVENUE UP FOR YEAR

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP.)—Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, said in the company's preliminary 1933 report that "the present trend of industry seems to justify expectation for further improvement."

While tempering his optimism with the statement that "no prophecy for the immedite future is here ventured," Willard asserted that "the outlook is more reassuring than it was one year ago."

Baltimore and Ohio's net income for 1933, after payment of interest and all other fixed charges, amounted to $204,722, as compared with a deficit in 1932 of $6,334,878. Willard said:

"Compared with the preceding year, freight revenues reflected an increase of $7,320,236, notwithstanding the emergency increase in rates authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission, effective January 4, 1932, which had contributed about $300,000 per month to the company's revenues, terminated as of September 30, 1933."

Canadian Freight Loadings Expand

MONTREAL, May 12.—Canadian car loadings during the week ended May 5, totaled 43,453, an increase of 292 cars over the previous week and 6,044 over like 1933 mark. For the year to May 5 the total was 743,199 cars, an increase of 142,280 in the like period of last year.

NEW YORK, May 12.—The drought situation in the West is becoming the chief factor in the business outlook.

Wheat prices the other day jumped the 5-cent limit allowed on the exchanges. Pleas for relief are coming from drought stricken areas. Business in some sections is already feeling the effects.

The experts tell us that unless soaking rains come by May 15, irreparable injury will be so serious as to amount to a national disaster.

To begin with, it seems that winter snowfall and spring rains have been deficient in large areas of the west. Rivers are near low water mark, and sub-soil moisture deficient. More recently the usual showers have been lacking, and terrific "dust storms" have resulted from high winds.

The drought reports come from Illinois and Iowa, Minnesota and the Dakotas, western Canada, various Rocky Mountain states, and parts of California.

As a result, the Department of Agriculture estimates the winter wheat crop at 416,000,000 bushels, which is a reduction of 30,000,000 bushels in a month. This is as of May 1, and since then conditions have been worse.

SPRING WHEAT HURT

In addition in large areas the spring wheat crop is badly hurt. In some sections it has been 30 per cent killed. Everywhere farmers are withholding planting because it does no good to put seed into dry dust.

Secretary Wallace says wheat crop conditions are the worst since 1894. Canadian reports say the fall wheat conditions is the worst in 16 years.

With oats, it is much the same as wheat.

And then there is the serious injury to pasturage and feed crops. The May 1 condition of hay was around 68 per cent of normal and far below a year ago. Pastures are in bad shape.

Fortunately, no shortage or famine is threatened. Corn prospects are fair. Rye crops promise to be above last year. We have a large surplus of wheat carried over from past years.

It is estimated that there are 260,000,000 bushels of wheat in elevators or held on farms. If the current estimates for the new crop are right at 630,000,000 bushels, that would make a total supply of 890,000,000 bushels.

The country does not need much more than 700,000,000 bushels in normal times, so the prospects are that, despite the drought, we will have something like 190,000,000 bushels more than necessary.

LESSENS PURCHASING POWER

The probable effects on business, however, are deplorable.

Farm purchasing power is being literally dried up. Not only will the quantity for sale during the summer and fall be reduced, but the farmers' cost of production per bushel will be high on account of the low yield per acre.

The railways will suffer not only from reduced grain traffic, but from the smaller volume of purchases by farmers.

Of course, the prospects of grain exports will become still more remote.

Then there is the necessary "relief," which means taxes and debts. Already the government is spending $25,000,000 a month for drought relief. The relief administrator is advocating a $10,000,000,000 public works program.

One thing that impresses me is the futility of government "planning" in such matters. Even after you get the farmers to "adjust" their acreage, there is nature to deal with. I fear that no "deal," new or old, can deal with the two fundamentals, (1) nature and (2) human nature.

Loans Cause Follansbee Receiver Action

By GEORGE H. SNYDER
Business Editor

THE APPOINTMENT of receivers for the Follansbee Brothers Company is attributed principally to the company's policy of building up inventories last year and the bank loans necessary to carry out this policy.

The company suffered heavy operating losses during the depression period but it was the accumulation of inventories which was responsible for the present difficulty.

In building up its inventories the company borrowed money from banks. The accumulation of these bank loans was primarily responsible for the financial troubles.

* * *

Owed Nothing At End of 1932

FOLLANSBEE BROTHERS reported losses in each year since 1929. The loss after all charges in 1932 was $1,044,897. This compared with a net loss of $665,572 in 1933.

The company came to the end of 1932, however, in a strong financial position. It owed nothing to banks. Current assets amounted to $2,631,391 against current liabilities of $180,817. Cash of $222,924 exceeded all current liabilities and the company held United States government securities of $605,967. In addition, the company held municipal securities carried at $202,963. The market value of these was only slightly reduced to $193,000.

Under such circumstances, Follansbee appeared to be well prepared to weather a long period of further depression.

* * *

Starts to Build Up Inventories

A YEAR LATER Follansbee's financial situation was greatly changed.

Inventories had increased from $1,362,351 at the end of 1932 to $1,671,389 at the end of 1933. The company also had $550,000 in notes payable to banks. Most of the United States government securities had disappeared and holdings of municipal securities were reduced in value. Current assets amounted to $2,712,423 against current liabilities of $858,150.

Undoubtedly some of the increased inventory was necessary to take care of expanding business. Operating losses cut into working capital. But a large share of the indebtedness incurred to banks appears to have been due to accumulation of inventories.

On March 31, indebtedness to banks had been reduced to $400,000. Holdings of United States government and other marketable securities had disappeared. Current assets amounted to $2,205,576 against current liabilities of $844,216. Cash amounted to $234,484. On the face of things this was not a bad situation. Apparently, however, the company could not meet its obligations to banks. This made the receivership necessary.

The organization has first mortgage 5 per cent sinking fund bonds of $2,525,000 outstanding, but these do not mature until 1947. Other capital obligations consist of $3,000,000 of 6 per cent preferred stock and 172,852 shares of common stock.

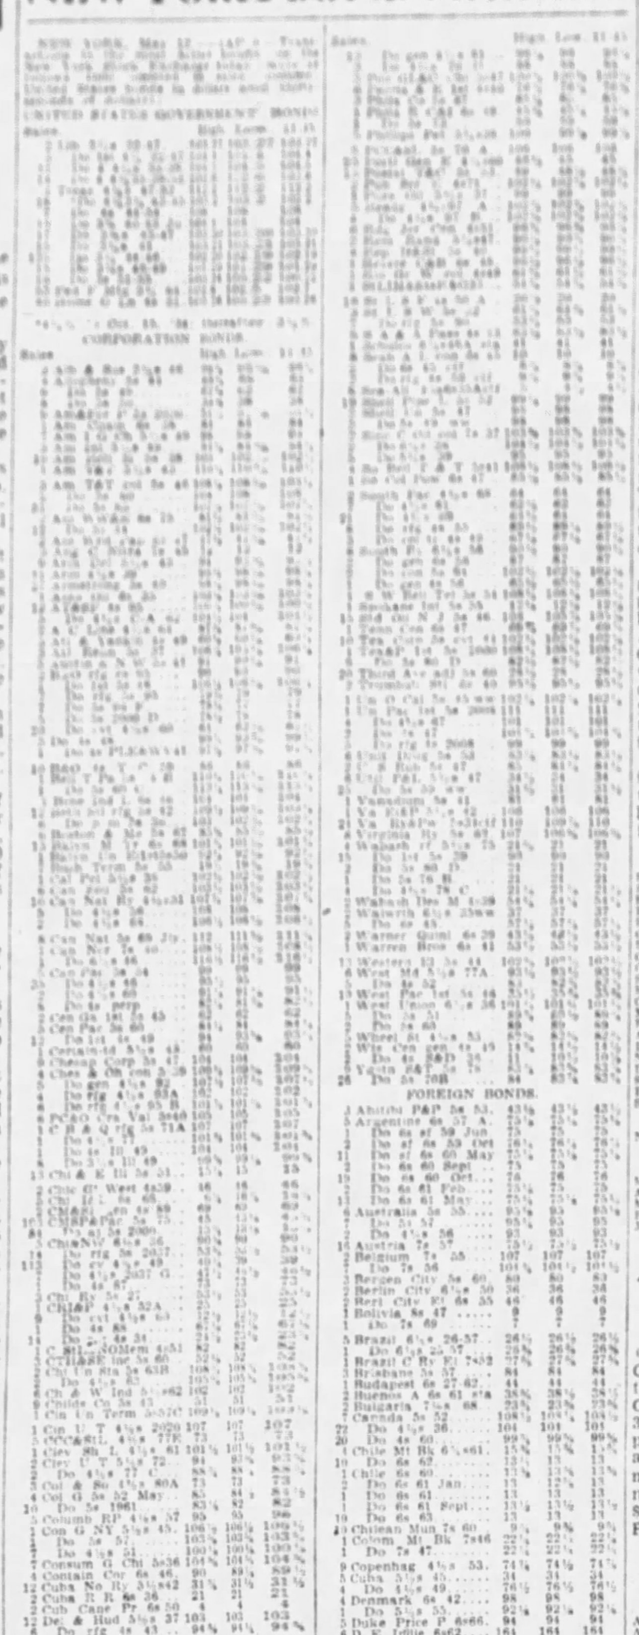
NEW YORK BOND MARKET



Weekly Bank Clearings

NEW YORK, May 13.—(AP.)—Although the total was slightly lower than for the week preceding, bank clearings of all reporting cities continue substantially higher than those of a year ago. The total this week for leading centers in the United States, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was $5,146,588,000 or 19.6 per cent larger than those for the same week of last year. At New York City clearings were $3,646,067,000, a gain of 15.1 per cent, while the total of $1,500,521,000 for all centers outside of New York was higher by 32.3 per cent.

An increase appears at every city reporting. At some points clearings at this time last year continued considerably restricted. New York City and Boston still show amounts in excess of those for a year ago, but the gains were not so large as at other centers. This perhaps reflects a falling-off in settlements through the banks now, on account of strictly financial operations.

Among the cities showing larger gains this week were Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Minneapolis, Atlanta, Dallas and the Pacific Coast points. The total the past week was below that for the preceding week by $500,187,000 a year ago, for practically the same two weeks there was a decline of $247,977,000.

Figures for leading cities, showing increases as compared with those of last year, are printed herewith. Also, daily bank clearings for the year to date:

Arizona Orders Cut in Gas Rates

PHOENIX, Ariz., May 12.—(INS.)—The Arizona Corporation Commission has ordered the Central Arizona Light and Power Company to reduce the gas rates 33 per cent and the light rates 22 per cent effective immediately for all towns it serves. It was estimated that this will mean an annual saving of approximately $500,000 to light and gas users in Phoenix, Tempe and Glendale.

New Oil Projects Given Federal O. K.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(INS.)—Development of 194 new oil pools in 10 states has been approved, Secretary of Interior Ickes stated.

The pools will add 81,000 acres of producing area to that already in operation. Approval was made contingent on observing the allowable quotas. Of the total, 59 cover 19,740 acres in Texas, and other pools will be developed as follows:

California, 6; Colorado, 2; Kansas, 42; Louisiana, 8; Michigan, 1; Montana, 1; New Mexico, 7; Oklahoma, 57, and Wyoming, 11.

Liverpool Wheat Market.

The market was due ⅝ to 2¼ cents lower, opened 1 to 1⅜ cents off, and closed ¾ to 1 cent off.

Federal Aided Housing May Be Regulated

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP.)—Plans for the nation's housing program, soon to be encompassed in administration-sponsored legislation, are said authoritatively to envisage strong federal supervision of building operations developed with government aid.

Officials say such supervision is fair where government money or credit is used, and further emphasize that if operations are as extensive as expected some central hand will be needed to see that the program evolves in an orderly manner.

The exact lines of the supervision are not known publicly, but in general housing experts say there would be an attempt to keep interest rates low, to see that construction occurs where needed, that certain standards as to material are followed, and to prevent building by those unable to pay.

There will be no intention, a high official said, of unreasonably restricting either builders or prospective home owners, but speculative and shoe-string operations on government funds will be rigidly excluded.

Modernization developments under the Home Owners' Loan Corporation already face certain limitations as to material and labor, and the restricting hand of the government is seen further in federal savings and loan associations—government-helped building and loan associations—and in private organizations which are members of the Home Loan Bank system.

These associations are required to follow certain financial practices, but such regulation goes no further than the similar supervision of member banks of the Federal Reserve system.

TRADE, POLITICS ESTRANGED BY NEW DEAL

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Government and business under the "New Deal" have most yet quite learned how to live together.

Mr. Rukeyser

It is a sign of recovery that business, which was prostrate a little more than a year ago, is at length becoming critical.

Unquestionably the Roosevelt program of narcotics and direct aid helped to rouse business from its state of "shell shock."

But at last business has reached a stage where it asks a period of comparative rest from stimulants.

Timing and pace have become the principal problems of wise administration at this juncture.

INVESTORS SELF-CONSCIOUS

Business baiting politicians have overlooked the wide post-war diffusion of stocks of American corporations. T. N. Carver, Harvard economist, once alluded to the process "as the present economic revolution in the United States."

"Soaking the thrifty" has tended to make the investors' block become more self-conscious.

Public utilities investors, for example, have recently organized a nationwide propaganda organization.

SLOAN SPEAKS OUT

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors Corporation, has been speaking out courageously, despite the fashion of "cracking down" on critics.

Referring to the increasingly wide dissemination of ownership of American companies, Sloan recently pointed out:

"It is a fact that the distribution of ownership of American business is rapidly expanding. The result is that the number of large stockholders and their holdings are continually decreasing and that the number of small stockholders and their holdings are continually increasing. This trend, I believe, is highly desirable."

URGES FIGHT

In effect, Sloan advised his shareholders to go into politics, and to fight uneconomic policies, which "are too frequently actuated by the selfish interest of an organized minority or by political considerations." Sloan said:

"I believe it to be the duty of every one of us to contribute what is possible, from the standpoint of one's experience and knowledge, to a better understanding of the important questions which are before us today."

It would have been well if Sloan had gone farther and explicitly advised the investor and the business should approach public question from the broad standpoint of national welfare, rather than solely from their immediate, narrow, selfish interests.

In the long run, sound policies promote business.

When business interests, however, overconcentrate on immediate, purely selfish objectives, their views are discounted by the public.

Smaller Cotton Consumption Seen

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP.)—The New York Cotton Exchange service estimates consumption of cotton by domestic mills in April at 520,000 bales against 543,000 bales in March and 470,000 bales in April, 1933.

STOCK MARKET TREND TURNS ERRATIC

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP.)—Irregularity predominated in the early part of today's stock trading. A number of shares rallied moderately following early hesitation, but reactionary tendencies persisted in others. Some of the sugar issues and gold mining shares attracted offerings. Motors were easy. Rails and a number of industrials improved. Activity was moderate.

Santa Fe, American Telephone, United States Smelting, Case, New York Central, Western Union and National Distillers, got up sizeable fractions to around a point. United States Steel and Bethlehem steadied, but American Can, Chrysler, Great Western Sugar, Dome and McIntyre sold a point or so lower.

While the business picture was not too cheering to trade analysts, a pickup in private construction awards during April was reported by the F. W. Dodge Corporation, which estimated the total as the largest since August of last year. Publicly financed types of construction, however, showed a decline from March of approximately 40 per cent, but were still considerably greater than in April, 1933.

In line with general building activities, the financial district was interested in word from Youngstown that the various steel companies there have tentatively adopted programs which call for construction expenditures of more than $20,000,000 during the next two years.

Steel production was said to be holding up well in the face of general expectations that the peak of output was near at hand. An increase in heavier steel products was believed to reflect an expansion of outside work due to better weather conditions.

Statistical observers found that virtually all consumers' goods industries are now operating at a somewhat reduced rate, although comparisons with 1933 are still highly favorable.

The British pound was up 5/8 of a cent at $5.11⅞ in opening dealings and the French franc was slightly lower at 6.60¾ cents.

GRAIN VALUES SOAR ANEW

CHICAGO, May 12.—Fresh advances in grain values took place today after early setbacks that amounted in some cases to a cent a bushel. Renewal of dust storms northwest did much to bring about enlargement of speculative demand.

Opening unchanged to 5/8 lower, July 86¾-87, wheat sagged all around, and then made quick rallies of more than 1½ cents from early bottom figures. Corn started unchanged 3/8 cents off and subsequently advanced.

PRICE 'RACKET' BOTHERS NRA

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Collapse of price-fixing and price control arrangements during the summer months is being discussed as a probability by NRA officials. In a confidential report by the Consumers' Advisory Board to Gen. Johnson, not yet made public by NRA, it is stated that open price associations set up under codes are working, in some instances, to lower prices rather than to stabilize them.

Evidence is reaching recovery headquarters in increasing volume showing that price provisions in codes are not working. A vast system of "bootlegging" throughout business and industry is rapidly increasing as purchasers of goods are discovering methods of cutting under the established prices, according to NRA officials.

REFINERS MEET 'GAS' RAISE

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP.)—The Sinclair Refining Company, Warner-Quinlan Company and Pan-American Petroleum and Transport Company announced they would meet the ½-cent per gallon advance in gasoline prices announced by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and the Standard Oil Company of Louisiana to become effective today throughout their territories with the exception of the State of Arkansas.

At the offices of several of the larger marketing companies the opinion was expressed that all of the principal distributors would soon fall in line with the advanced prices.

Chickie's Daughter

By ELENORE MEHERIN

CHAPTER LXVIII

Pippin read over Bill's letter. Her own aching heart made her gentle. She wanted to weep.

She sat there musing; wondering about this mystifying thing called love; this subtle, exciting, overwhelming emotion drawing you so ruthlessly, so defenselessly to another.

Kevin had this power over her; she had it over Bill. She recalled that extravagant thing he said:

"When I hold you in my arms like this, empires may fall, ships be sunk, I would not know or care."

She reached for paper and began to write. She liked Bill's breezy dash and the warm, impetuous sweetness of words whispered against her cheek. Yet, now she could well wish he were not returning.

She felt lost and in such doubt. It was seven days since she wrote her last letter to Kevin, a long letter which she purposely made interesting and merry. Tucked away toward the end was this paragraph:

"Not a word from the wandering youth tonight or last night! Seven days since a line has come from you. I've answered your letters three to one and more . . . but this, my gallant gentleman, is the very last unless you take time this very moment to scrawl three words across a blank white page. Three words it is or your little old sweetheart will take all promises back, she'll tread the primrose path and scribble no more to the unanswering void."

Excuses Kevin

She air-mailed the letter. There was time by now for an answer to have come. She found it easy to excuse him. Days fly quickly when one is busy. He had not forgotten moments of a dear communion. His eyes, his hands, his lips had not lied. He meant all he said.

Yet now there were these rumors. It might be true that Hildegarde had come 3,000 miles to claim him. Perhaps she had some claim.

This was the thought that downed her. It could so easily be! And without any remote wish of his. Yet he would be lost. More cruelly than in death.

Her quick imagination saw him tormented and unhappy, saw him hoping for escape and finding none. At first she would not let the faintest shadow of this fear edge into her mind; but as the days passed it entered and grew.

Until finally she thought of writing directly and asking—end the uncertainty. At least, then she would know what to face and gather the strength to do it.

Bill Writes Pippin

Bill wrote on the last page of his letter:

"Pippin wire me at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles, on Thursday. I want to know you're saving the date and glad to do it. If you receive this letter in time, and I'm sure you will, don't wire but send a good kind letter, saying you love me in a gentle, yearning way as of yore. Say it and send it. Dear Pippin, you will!"

Bill wrote this and felt happy. He had all Pippin's letters in his wallet. He read them over and thought with high, laughing confidence: She does not know how much she cares!

He recalled the night they were lost in the mountains and she had settled against him in that sweet, trusting way, so sure he was a Galahad. He recalled the tears streaming down her cheeks as she stood in the pallid morning light while he leaned from the cabin and waved goodbye.

He took the ring he had bought, stuck it with her letters in his pocket. She loved him or she would!

Bids Mother Goodbye

He bade his mother goodbye. She followed him about with warm, anxious eyes. She was a strong woman yet with a fragile look. Her hair was fluffy but the blonde of it all silvered. Eyes brown like his but a network of lines at the corners. Yet Bill thought his mother young because of a girlish wistfulness even in the tones of her voice. She had lost her husband early in a tragic way and before life had paled; she retained a girl's dream that love is everything.

"You will go the southern route, Bill? I hear it is more safe."

"I've crossed the continent twice and no mishap. Don't be worried for me!"

"But you're so impatient now. You will not fly at night?"

"No, I won't. I mean to get there, mother."

Ellen Lodge smiled and held to her son's hand. She said, wistfully: "You are very much in love?"

Bill laughed in his mother's face: "When you see her, you'll know why."

"I like her picture and things you've told me. Give me time to arrive for the wedding, won't you?"

"Ample time for that. I am not sure she'll have me."

Ellen's eyes were skeptical. She gave a happy, derisive laugh. As though a girl could look at Bill and not love him; not see that he was fine. She remembered the night Bill's father and all on his ship were sunk in the North Sea. Remembered the small lad shadowing her for days; strengthening her, so that she had to put a brave heart in the desolation.

Tears swam to her eyes. She kissed him and said happily: It is not possible that you can lose."

Storm Warning

Thursday night Bill arrived at the Ambassador. He found a letter from Pippin:

"You accuse me of writing sweet letters just for the joy of playing with words. Is that what makes your own pen so swift and warm? I would be a strange, cold person if I were not glad to see you. I am not strange nor very cold, I fear. So I'll welcome you and joyfully. It will be gay to wing through blue sunny skies again and, yes, I'll take the ring you bring me for remembrance.

"You ask if I still would say I'd not mind being lost on Mars with only you for company. I'm feeling in a very melancholy mood tonight, Bill. Perhaps it's from over-study. But I'd rather welcome being lost. I'd like it far, far away. Mars would do and you would be sweet company!"

He read the letter and wished he were in San Francisco now.

At six Friday morning they were tuning up the motor.

"Good wind is blowing through the Tehachapi. Likely to be bumpy but passable."

He had ridden down a storm in the lower Rockies over New Mexico. A little wind wouldn't daunt either him or his plane.

Battles Storm

He reached the pass where the Sierra Nevadas marching the length of California on the east meet the Coast Range traversing the west.

The wind came solidly like waves of a heaving, beating sea. The plane chopped about.

Suddenly there were clouds; they sealed tight above him. He looked at the altimeter and nosed the plane up, but the wind bellied; it lifted the left wing. The ship dropped.

Rain came heavily; an arrow of lightning shooting through the storm with ghostly blue radiance. The plane bumped with shocking force over rolling black clouds. He tried again to nose the plane up. Efforts to gain altitude in the buffeting seethe of wind and rain failed again.

Going in circles! With a sickening tug at his mind he told himself of this, and maneuvered with half-loops and half-rolls to reverse his direction.

"Get out of it! Turn back! Ride it down!"

He switched on his landing lights. They stabbed faintly through a gray, swirling chaos.

Another flare. He saw the mountains sharp, precipitous, straight before him; the ship tossing about, almost out of control. A nauseating drop and a black ledge of cliff—

Bill in Crash

At one o'clock that Friday Pippin crossed the living room, tucked a note-book under her arm and was about to open the screen door to the veranda.

She halted with a shock. Chickie was coming up the steps. Chickie smiled, but there was a strange, white, distant look in her face. She kissed Pippin.

"Don't be alarmed. This telegram came to the house."

This was the message:

"Lieut. William Lodge flying through the Tehachapi crashed in a storm. Seriously hurt. Asks that you come at once. St. Mary's Hospital, Bakersfield.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

If your skin has a yen for freckles don't wear those pretty frocks cut down at the back. Yallery polka dots like to settle there. And, as you'll never see down your own back, you won't know how terrible they look. Nor will you be able to get at them with a bleach.

Light freckles often give way to a whitening lotion made by combining equal parts of lemon juice and peroxide. Put it on with cotton every night. Keep the skin surface oiled. The buttered epidermis resists the effects of the burning rays of the sun. Powder helps. It forms a protection against Sol's warm kisses.

Only the girl who is divinely slender can worry along these days without some kind of a foundation garment. These lovely frocks with stream lines from bust to knees must not show a roll or a crinkle, and they will unless the feminine shape is neatly harnessed.

Choose a corsetiere who knows her corset strings and all the rest of it. Getting the right model requires the seeing eye, one that knows what the silhouette should be.

BRITISH IN AFRICA—BOER WAR—DASH ON LADYSMITH

British trade expansion in South Africa met with stubborn resistance from the Boer states, Transvaal and Orange, formed by old Dutch settlers, precipitating the Boer War (1899-1902). After much sacrifice the valiantly fighting Boers were defeated, the conquered Boer states becoming British colonies. In 1910 they were federated with the neighboring Cape Colony and Natal as the Union of South Africa. Above: British attack on Ladysmith, an important strategic point in the Boer War. (World History)

ADMINISTRATION OF PRESIDENT GROVER CLEVELAND

The Republican party lost at the polls in 1884 because it opposed reforms. Grover S. Cleveland, governor of New York, was elected President on the Democratic ticket.

The Interstate Commerce Act (1887) to regulate enterprises affecting community at large (mainly railroads), the Dawes Act (1887) conferring citizenship on Indians, the restoration of 80,000,000 acres of public land from usurpation, marked a new era.

Above contemporary cartoon ridicules the inadequate power of the Interstate Commissioners, created by the Interstate Commerce Act, having authority to investigate and report, but no power to regulate.

President Cleveland's efforts to reduce tariff (Mills' Tariff Act, 1888), bringing discord among the Democrats, was one chief cause of his defeat in the election of the same year.

THE "TRIANGLE OF LIFE"

Above triangles represent various types of individuals produced by the same germ cells (constituting heritage) if environment and training are variable. The foundation of the "Triangle of Life" is heritage.

The recognition of the great influence of heritage in development of body and mind may leave a fatalistic impression in man: "I cannot get away from inheritance," which is justified however only to a slight extent. Our character is modifiable individually and we can correct "internal organic inheritance" by "external heritage:" material and spiritual influence by training and suitable environment. STEAM-HEAT PIPING—VAPOR HEATING

Steam heat piping may be one pipe-system (common pipe for steam and returning condensed water) or two pipe-system (one for steam, other for water), shown above.

In vapor-vacuum heating (below) air from pipes, radiators is expelled first by steam or by pump. Vacuum sucks the steam at low pressure. It is economical (50-70% efficiency), but requires greater care, air-tight joints. (General Science)

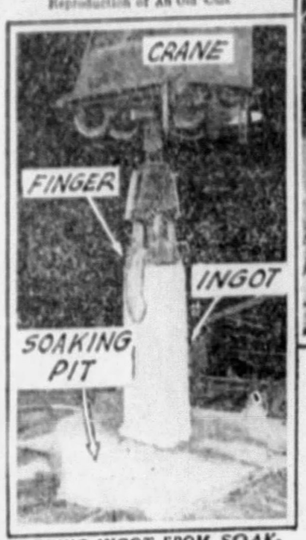
Ay, tear her tattered ensign down!
Long has it waved on high,
And many an eye has danced to see
That banner in the sky;
Beneath it rung the battle shout,
And burst the cannons roar;
The meteor of the ocean air
Shall sweep the clouds no more.

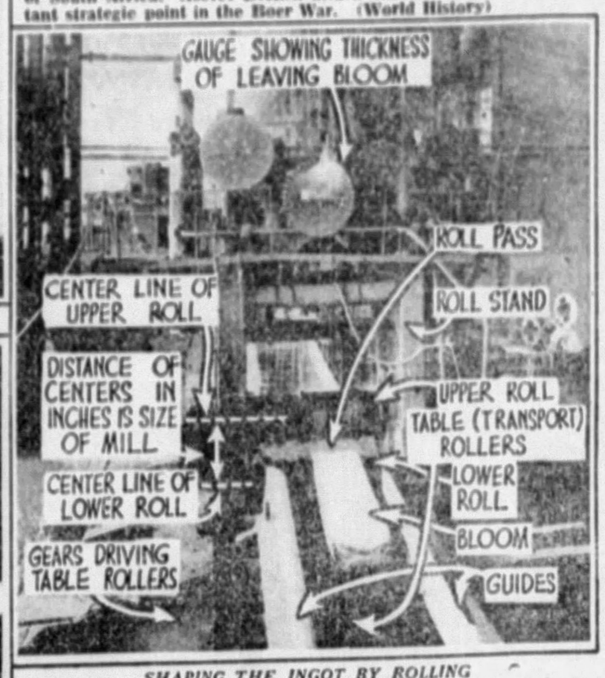
. . . . . .

O, better that her shattered bulk
Should sink beneath the wave;
Her thunders shook the mighty deep,
And there should be her grave;
Nail to the mast her holy flag,
Set every threadbare sail,
And give her to the god of storms,
The lightning and the gale!

Above spirited ballad (1830) of Oliver Wendell Holmes (1809-1894), an American poet, novelist, humorist, essayist, lecturer of unrivaled versatility and cleverness, made him quickly popular and saved the famous old ship "Constitution" from proposed scrapping. (Amer. Liter.)



LIFTING INGOT FROM SOAKING PIT



SHAPING THE INGOT BY ROLLING

Ingots, prisms cast from Bessemer, or Open Hearth steel, are reheated uniformly to about 2000° F. in the soaking pits—underground furnaces (left)—preparatory to rolling.

Rolling, the most important process of mechanical shaping, is effected by rolls—cylindrical bodies, driven by steam engine or electric motors—between which the steel is drawn by friction. The ingot is reduced to blooms (section 6"x6" or greater) as shown above, then to billets (smaller) or to slabs (oblong) then to commercial shapes like rails, angles, channels, etc. by leading the steel through the gradually reducing passes (the openings between flat or grooved rolls). It's Art, But Is It Beautiful?

We have attended an art exhibition under the CWA. It's just as oily as any other kind.

There is a revolution in artistic circles that means profound thought and freedom. An artist no longer paints what he sees. He paints what ain't there.

Your master of oils, paints and varnishes gets indignant if a critic discovers anything reasonable in his epileptic blueprints. The way they paint now is to close their eyes, wave their brushes three times and then try to pin the tail on the donkey.

Art is no longer a record of habits, dress and contemporary subjects. The master who painted a series of rheumatic angles on a rampage has finally told us why he named it "Nude Descending a Stairway." He said the vice squad was coming up in the elevator.

One of the best of the worst artists summarizes it all. He says, "Art has nothing to do with the imitation of objects. First, we receive an impression and then we figure its equivalent.

"Anybody can paint a quart of skim milk. But, it takes a genius to figure that a quart of milk weighs as much as two pounds of hay. Hay means cows and farms. That means trespassing.

And rather than stop a load of indignant rock salt from a double-barreled gun we ignore the original theme altogether and draw a series of Babylonian curly-cues reclining in the shade of a single cornstalk.

"The punctured cruller in the corner is progress defying bookkeeping. And the surf in the tea cup is a mermaid decoying a railroad brakeman from the fast freight. We show that with the double X which is the legendary symbol for many things. There is no room in a tea cup for a mermaid, and a brakeman is easily decoyed. So why bother with the trivial?"

That's the ultra-modern way of changing the subject in oils and turpentine. The only concession the shaggy colonists make to civilization is in still using beautiful gold frames. The gold frame is the peacock's tail of modern art and the rest is just a dead gander.

Not that we are panning the modern oysters. Their paintings were going good right up until the time they sprained their wrists. After that happens you must stop work or become a mad genius. They elected to speed up production.

Mayor McNair Continues to Muddle Things—Brief Comment on Local News

Mayor W. N. McNair has run true to form in his effort to appoint Archibald Marshall Bell as Public Safety Director in place of Ralph E. Smith. Another muddle has resulted. Bell's fitness has been questioned because of his out of town residence, and Smith says he has not been officially dismissed, and will stay on the job until he is. McNair may manage to muddle through—but thank goodness for a sensible Council!

Partisanship is beginning to run high in the pri- mary campaign. Charges and counter-charges are flying back and forth. The wise course for the voters is to focus their attention on the issues and pay little heed to non-essential things that are brought out in the heat of the campaign, but soon forgotten. Of the foremost importance is the question of modernized local government to ease the burden of the taxpayers.

There are many ways in which local government requires modernization. One way is through the consolidation of school districts. Allegheny County has more than a hundred independent school districts, formed in oxcart days; each district has its own board of directors, tax collector, secretary, auditor and solicitor. The number of these units could be reduced with profit both to the taxpayers and the pupils.

Here is a concrete example of how the taxpayers would benefit: According to Dr. James N. Rule, Superintendent of Public Instruction, it costs about 19 cents to collect $100 of school taxes in Pittsburgh; but in the small town and rural school districts the average cost per $100 of school taxes collected is $3.10. Consolidate the rural districts, get rid of some of the tax collectors and other unnecessary school officials and a saving could be effected.

Consolidation of townships, counties and other administrative units would permit additional savings by eliminating a horde of superfluous political parasites. Bear in mind that these units were created a hundred years ago, when, because of the difficulties of travel and communication, every neighborhood had to have its own governmental officials. Automobiles, street cars and telephones make larger units practicable and desirable.

Thomas Hasley, Director of County Highways, is quoted as saying that in a 100-mile survey he found only two political signs posted. He apparently did not include in his tour the rural sections of the Twelfth Legislative District, which lies south of the Ohio River. Photographs of a number of illegal political posters and the names of candidates thus advertised in a rather small sector of that district have been published in this newspaper.

It is a fact, however, that the people, indignant at defacing of trees and poles with the candidates' placards, are tearing them down. The posters which remain are in large part those that cannot be reached without the use of a ladder. We suggest to Mr. Hasley that he send out a crew with ladders to remove the offending signs. High on a tree along the Flaugherty's Run road, for example, there is still a poster advertising the candidacy of the late County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong.

More effective than the removal of the signs as a warning to candidates to desist from the illegal practice would be a statement by bodies of citizens that they would not vote for persons who offended in this way. We suggest that civic and trade bodies, women's clubs, patriotic associations, and the like, take such a stand. There will be no more posting of signs when candidates realize that they alienate instead of attracting voters.

The motive for the popular protest against the defacing of trees and rocks with politicians' signs is a desire to preserve the beauty of the countryside. That same desire is shown rather curiously in an appeal that has been made to the State Highway Department not to improve roads leading into some of the state forests where people have summer homes. There are not a few people who would like to escape from pavements for awhile.

This feeling was reflected in the interest aroused by the statement in these columns a few days ago that there is a 2,050-mile footpath—the Appalachian Trail—which follows the mountain ridges from Maine to Georgia, and which should appeal to persons who would like to take a walking trip in a scenic region where they would not have to dodge automobiles. Some of the most attractive sections of the Appalachian Trail lie in Pennsylvania.

Love of nature is also reflected in the approval that has been given the protest in these columns against the Game Commission's action in permitting beavers to be killed in the recent open season—a policy which threatens the extermination of these interesting animals. Dr. I. H. Alexander, president of Pittsburgh Chapter of the Izaak Walton League, writes that in his opinion the Game Commission made a grave mistake.

The Brookville American, indorsing the Sun-Telegraph's demand that the Game Commission restore beavers in the Cook Forest State Park, where they appear to have been exterminated in the recent trapping season, makes another proposal which will have a wide appeal. It is that the Clarion River, which flows through Cook Forest, be cleared of industrial pollution. Let us have beautiful streams of clean water, harmless and interesting wild life, and trees free from advertising signs.

The State Liquor Stores have put out another cheap whisky in an effort to take trade from the bootleggers. But it is not bootleggers dealing in low-priced blends that are giving trouble—it is the illicit dealers who cater to the Sewickley trade and the night club crowd, and who offer first-class liquor smuggled in from Canada at prices with which the legitimate dealers, having to pay Federal taxes aggregating $7 a gallon, cannot compete.

Solomon's remark that there is nothing new under the sun is recalled by an article in tomorrow's issue of the American Weekly, the magazine distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. The article is entitled "The Tortures of Beauty Culture 150 Years Ago," and is illustrated with an arresting sketch drawn at the dawn of the Nineteenth Century.

Sentinel Louie, O. Soglow's humorous creation, is much disturbed by two men engaged in drilling holes near his post of duty. How he succeeds in driving them away is shown in Soglow's colorful pictures in Puck, the Comic Weekly Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. There are many other funnies by the foremost cartoonists.

PETITION AGAINST U. S. JOINING LEAGUE OF NATIONS AND WORLD COURT

If you want to save America from European entanglements and keep your country out of foreign wars, and foreign wars out of your country, sign this petition.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE UNITED STATES CONGRESS:

We protest AGAINST the United States participating in the League of Nations or in the World Court of the League of Nations, with or without "reservations."

We petition our Federal Government to keep our United States "free from foreign affairs," as the Father of Our Country wisely enjoined.

We urge our Congress at Washington to keep our government from meddling in foreign affairs, and to keep foreign nations from meddling in our American affairs.

As loyal American citizens, we ask our loyal representatives to keep our country out of foreign conflicts and complications and to keep foreign conflicts and complications out of our country.

NAME ADDRESS

Additional names may be added to this petition by pasting a sheet of paper hereto. PRESENTED Through the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Return to League Court Editor, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Telegraph Square, Pittsburgh, Pa.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, May 12.—Purely personal piffle: Nine out of ten will bet you Louise Dresser is Theodore Dreiser's sister. Well, she isn't. The garbage man in our town was named Raleigh Cecil. No matter how big the meal, I can always finish off some salt water taffy.

Douglas Gilbert reports the grandest of all after-dinner speeches. Wilton Lackeye, called upon for an address, said: "Ladies and gentlemen. My address is 130 West 44th street!" And sat down. Best play title in years: "Waterloo Bridge." I pay my income taxes in one lump to avoid the quarterly jitters. And am I broke!

When a policeman walks toward me, my throat dries up like a rain drop on the Sahara. When I meet most people for whom I have an aversion, I find them dandy. Add sneeze names: Theophil Sczechowicz, of Salem, Mass. The only person who ever told me he thought he was going to pass away and did was Roy K. Moulton.

Broadway's greatest and most beloved sentimentalist is Gene Buck. My wife wrote her mother a 10-page letter every day for 16 years. Mayor Gaynor is the only man in high public office I ever saw in the subway. Montaigne said long ago what any writer you name is trying to say today.

* * *

I can buy more desk things I never use. A fuddy-duddy! Walter Huston gives the most realistic performance of his time. Frank Buck has snooped so long in the jungles he has a tip-toey walk. The silliest I've felt for some time was while trying to help pull a stalled car out of the snow, a crowd of bus smart alecs parked nearby sang the Volga boat song. I love to talk to stage-struck waitresses in Hollywood.

* * *

You'd never think John Golden, whose plays are so delightfully sugary, has the most caustic tongue among producers. I'm still in love with Marie Dressler And if I were 21, Will Rogers would be popping down-stairs every evening at 10 to turn out the parlor light. His daughter, Mary, is a dream. I can burst out laughing any time, anywhere, at a giraffe. Gene Markey is probably the nearest to America's modern fashion plate.

* * *

Some publisher ought to tease a book about Mark Twain out of H. H. Rogers. And Lindbergh should some day reveal the skulduggery to topple him from his pedestal. Dirty work at the cross roads, my masters! Rainy, blowy nights I like to loll in a leisurely hot bath, dine off a tray in a freshly sheeted bed and go for a mystery shocker. As much fun as anyone can have. What pretty eyes Margaret Moore has! When a boy I used to day dream of growing up to look like Senator Warren Harding, come back home with the bands playing, and speak from the rear platform of the train. Girl twins are fascinating, but boy twins goofy to me. The best known dramatic critic outside of New York is Chicago's Ashton Stevens. There is magnificent sense of pantomimic timing about that bow-legged-sawed-off runt in Borrah Minevitch's harmonica band. Norma Shearer needs a strong film to make her fans forget that rip-tide thing.

* * *

Ned Deletome in our town could fake a laugh that way years before anyone heard of Olsen and Johnson. That best seller, "The Native's Return," struck me as a dull book about dull people in a dull country. Last week I tried to introduce two people who quit speaking 19 years ago. Helpful Harold! New York's most beautiful church facade is at 37th and 5th avenue. Postmaster General Farley is one of my lesser enthusiasms. He can't take it.

* * *

Big movie cathedrals drive away customers by too lengthy programs. A single article of jewelry is excellent taste. I love to read sing-song Hiawatha kind of poetry out loud, but it drives my wife ork-orky. My father's hotel bus driver could rack valises in a row, sliding them across the floor. A card! My first newspaper job paid $2 a week. No side remarks, please!

* * *

No one can look so swagger in a sweater as Townsend Netcher. Rabbit Maranville is more of a diamond hero to me than Ruth. But none tops the swaggering Mike Donlin. I never know which way to look when someone inquires: "How did you happen to take up literary work?" In this era of period furnishings, I'm afraid to give wedding presents for fear of upsetting the entire house. My wonder gift to newlyweds is usually a berry spoon. George Jessel grows better and better at each banquet. Anyway Bobby Jones dressed in the best taste of any golfer of his period. My grandfather used to scream at me when I came to the table: "Your hair looks like a cat had kittened in it!"

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

My Brother

My food is good, my fire is warm,
My bed is soft and sweet;
A stout roof shelters me from storm.
From rain or cold or heat.

My brother has no house, no home,
His food a crust of bread;
Through bleakest weather he must roam,
The roadside for his bed.

For this, I cannot eat my meals,
Though we are set apart,
I feel each pang my brother feels,
His hunger rends my heart!

For hours upon my bed pf down
I toss, while night grows old.
And watch my brother tramping down
The highways, weak and cold.

For every being, warmth and food,
Thus is earth's bounty meant.
Until my brother shares all good
I cannot rest content.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

Do you know of some young fellow who is having a hard struggle to get along and who has proven worthy of assistance?

Wouldn't it be a fine thing for you to play godfather to him?

You might do a lot for him in such a way that you would not deprive him of any of the benefits of individual effort.

There are a lot of energetic and earnest young fellows, reliable in every way, who have not had openings to permit them to show of what stuff they are made.

Perhaps a word from you to a friend might give a young chap the opportunity he is looking for.

Just a little advice that you could give might be helpful.

If you can't do anything else, a few deserved compliments may encourage the ambitious one and make for renewed effort.

No, it won't spoil him—if he is willing to do anything of an honest nature to get along he would be too sensible to let praise go to his head.

Aiding a deserving lad or an older person who also may be deserving of assistance, will afford you a degree of satisfaction which will fully remunerate you for your efforts.

A Letter to Mother

(Special for Mothers' Day)

After she was gone, I wrote a letter to my mother.

I wrote so seldom to her, during my busy life. Not that I forgot her. I tried to be a good daughter—thought I really was. I was always buying some little trinket that might please her; sending her flowers, or telegrams.

It's easy enough to do things like that. Actually, just selfish fun. But writing a letter—that's different. Particularly in a job like mine. When you've ploughed through a daily mail of hundreds of strangers' complaints, you're sick of words—feel you can't write another one, to save your soul. So, as the years went on, though I never meant to neglect her, I hardly sent my mother a line.

And there was another reason, as well as the work, for that silence which widened between us. I'd left home when I was very young—barely 18—a restless, rebellious youngster with little thought for anyone but myself.

My mother had worked bitterly hard trying to make a home in that rough, pioneer town where I was born. What a cruel struggle it must have been for her, gently reared and unused to work—beating her heart out in loneliness for that "little green isle" she was never to see again! How she must have longed to ease her homesickness by talking it all out to someone!

Often—I can see it now, when it is too late—she must have tried to find that ease with us, her children, telling us of those great waves beating against the wild Irish shore; of the daffodils and primroses, spreading their bright tangle in the sweet Irish spring; of the old, thatched cottages and gray, stone walls, rosy with hawthorne and abuzz with bees.

But we were selfish young savages, so filled with the wonder of our new world and our new lives that we had little interest in a land that seemed a million miles away.

She was our mother. We could not see beyond that fact; could not see that she, too, was a person with needs of her own—did not even try to see it. What ruthless, greedy egotists youngsters are, taking love and service as their natural right!

And I, going out so young, across the continent, to make a place for myself, seemed most ungrateful of all. I wasn't really indifferent. But I was desperately bewildered and unhappy, as she, too, must have been. We both, perhaps, expected more understanding from each other than was reasonable.

So, though I wept out my young eyes nightly with longing for her, my letters were perfunctory, infrequent. Hers were reproachful and hurt. A distance widened between us. Not anything definite. Indeed, had anyone said that such a distance existed, I would have denied it indignantly. But there it was.

And so she went through the lonely years, longing for the envelopes that never came. When she was gone, I realized how it must have been. The empty house, with the stillness rising about her in a darkening tide as she sat waiting in her chair by the window. The dreadful sameness of the hours—old hands plucking, plucking; tired eyes gazing, gazing; crippled feet yearning for the garden they had loved! Cruelest of all, the fright that must have seized her—feeling life slip away; watching death come nearer, nearer.

I could have helped her in that fright. I could have warmed her back to pride and hope again; made her feel that the years hadn't been wasted; that she didn't have to face the future all alone—that she still was needed, not as "just mother," but as a woman.

I could have given her that comfort, daily, in a dozen words.

Instead, I let her wait.

And then, suddenly, the waiting was all over. She would not be watching—she would not be fearing—any more. And bending above her, in an agony of longing and remorse, I saw the truth.

How beautiful she was lying there, in the gay dress she had loved—scarlet satin, white ermine—her soft hair piled high in a shining crown; small, worn hands folded over their last rose!

So beautiful, for all her years! And yet, how pitifully young and alone, facing the great dark with that gallant smile on her little face.

That was the truth about her! She had always been young and alone! She had never been "just mother"—something created for our service — something automatically pure and powerful, wise, unselfish and kind. She had been a human being, lonely, bewildered, hungry for understanding. She had battled furiously to forget herself and live for us, instead. And we had taken it all for granted—loved her as a mother, but ignored her as a human being!

That was the truth about her! Why, oh, why had I never felt it, until her eyes were closed by death and mine by tears?

If only I had told her while there was time!

But now it was too late!

Or was it?

SUPPOSE I WROTE THOSE WORDS SHE LONGED TO HEAR, MIGHT SHE STILL READ THEM, WITH HER WAKING EYES—AND FEEL THEIR COMFORT?

Was it too late? Perhaps not. I could try.

And so, through one long night of sobs and fumbling words, I wrote that letter which I'd failed to send:

"My darling—

"Forgive me for the things I did not say! Forgive me for the loneliness I let you bear alone! Forgive me for those stupid gifts I sent "to Mother," when you were hungry for human sympathy! At last I know the truth about you, dear.

"I know, at last, how truly great you were! I know you were A WOMAN, first and last—and, after that, a mother. It was not easy for you to be brave and kind, patient and loyal, through the dragging years. You must have longed to live your life, as we lived ours—and fiercely hated being pushed aside.

"Somewhere, dear heart, you're walking, strong and free. Somewhere, at least, you have a chance to be yourself. God grant you do not have to walk alone!

"Let me walk with you—as I did not walk in life. Not as a daughter, seeing with a daughter's eyes—but as your tender, helpful, understanding friend.

"Oh, mother, feel me. Let me touch your hand! Tears have at last washed all our barriers down!

"YOUR GIRL."

* * *

Through one long night, I wrote my mother that.

Through all the days, that is my constant cry.

Is it too late? Or does she hear—and smile—and put her rested, happy hand in mine?

Human Side of the News

Paris Is Described as Those Who Love It Remember It In Paul Morand's Charming New Book

By Edwin C. Hill

BOOKS about Paris are legion, but an entirely new note is struck by Paul Morand in his delightful "Paris to the Life." An excellent translation has been published by the Oxford Press. Monsieur Morand shows the great city not as the tourist sees it but as all those who love it remember it.

Not the Paris of the Eiffel Tower, the Cafe de la Paix and the Moulin Rouge, but the real Paris, with its bars and its tiny public gardens; the Paris of the Church and aristocracy; industrial Paris with its tenements. Paris of the hawker and the concierge—the human side of that enchantress of cities we call Paris.

Paris is the city of the concierge. There is one for every house in which live more than one family. Call her janitress, or superintendent or whatever you will, her like exists nowhere else on the face of the earth. She combines the role of domestic tyrant, policeman and moral censor. Her lodge is the office from which she issues a running commentary upon the habits, ethical and esthetic, of her contemporaries; a confessional in which few absolutions are pronounced; a theater in which the most Parisian of Parisian comedies is played a hundred times a day.

In that dark secrecy are recruited the midinettes, the actresses, the cloakroom attendants of Paris, the apprentices to all those curious trades that are so characteristic of the city. It is the instinct of sociability that makes the Paris concierge. She loves to be in the "know," to have endless opportunities for gossip. But by nature she is as secretive as the street hawker is expansive.

She watches and condemns, corrects and disciplines. She is far prouder, far less tolerant, far more grasping, than the tenants over whom she presides. Like every good Frenchman, she no sooner gets authority than she abuses it. In politics she is nationalist with strong conservative leanings; she regards the President of the republic as one of the family and enjoys a good cry at public funerals. She has a great respect for money—and for anyone who gives it to her. A man's generosity can be gauged at once from the way in which his concierge speaks of him to callers.

* * *

French Police Keep Well Posted

EVERY detail she retails, every polite word she utters, tells its tale of the Christmas present he gives her.

Thanks to the concierge and the bar—those twin pillars of French society—the French police manage to keep themselves well posted in the life of the city. Monsieur Morand pictures for us, most vividly and colorfully, great markets. Les Halles—the rag merchants, priests, monks and nuns, street fairs and cafes; the hot chestnut vendors, who appear on every important street corner with the first cold weather.

They are round, as round as their charcoal braziers, all bundled up in shawls and mittens and caps, so that hardly so much as the end of a finger is visible. They are an essential part of the season, for the winter shell of Paris is compounded of cold water beneath dead leaves, and hot chestnuts.

Of the cafes, Monsieur Morand prefers the little ones, where there is no rudeness. That is the privilege of the waiters in the big cafes. The man who keeps a small bar in the true Latin tradition in Paris, does so partly because he wants to be his own master in a style, however small, partly because he likes to have his drink handy, but chiefly because he feels that this a vocation of friendliness and hospitality.

Paris is the paradise for the man over forty, because he can see beyond the bricks and mortar into the wonderland of remembered happiness. To picture his beloved Paris is for Monsieur Morand to picture a lifetime and he does it exceedingly well. His book is spiritedly illustrated by Doris Speigel, who in her drawings has captured the essence of the great city.

Paris is even now looking hopefully toward our shores for the rush of summer tourists she used to know so well. But it isn't likely there will be much rushing this summer, the state of foreign exchange being what it is and the state of the dollar so low. But those who do go to Paris this summer will have their fill of charm and beauty. They will be interested, being American, in our new embassy, standing at the northwest corner of the Place de la Concorde. It apparently suffered little from the fury of the mob.

U. S. Ambassador Has New Home

A VERY interesting and beautiful building, the new home for our Ambassador to France, where Jesse Strauss presides today. The site cost more than a million, and the building itself a third as much. It was built from plans originally drawn 175 years ago by the architect Gabriel, whose name is borne by the most beautiful little street in all Paris, the Rue Gabriel.

From the windows of the embassy, American visitors may look out over the most historic public square in the world; where the guillotine did its terrible work during the French Revolution; where the tumbrils, every day, carted their loads of men and women to die under the descending knife of gentle Dr. Guillotine; where Louis Sixteenth and Marie Antoinette were executed; where Charlotte Corday, the Duke of Orleans, Danton and his followers, Camille Desmoulins and the blood-stained monster, Robespierre, gave their heads to the basket.

The Place de la Concorde today is the very center of fashionable Paris, and the original buildings of Louis the Fifteenth still remain. The obelisk which rises in its center came from the great Temple of Luxor in Egypt, where it was set up by Rameses the Second, thousands of years ago. Fountains which rise around it provide a lovely electrical display at night. And around the great square are eight lofty statuees representing the principal cities of the modern republic. A fascinating spot, not only for its thrilling history, but for its magnificent beauty.

Move in Congress to Ban Disloyal Teachers

By James T. Williams, Jr.

There is no room for the hyphen in our citizenship. There is no place for a 50-50 Americanism in the United States. We have room in this country for but one flag, the Stars and Stripes, and we should tolerate no allegiance to any other flag, whether a foreign flag, the red flag or black flag. We have room for but one loyalty, loyalty to the United States.—Theodore Roosevelt.

CONGRESS has been called upon to take cognizance of "the foes of our own household," as they were branded by Theodore Roosevelt, who are trying to turn the colleges, schools and universities of the United States into incubators of disloyalty to the Constitution and the flag.

Congressman Edward A. Kenney, of New Jersey, has introduced in the House a joint resolution, one effect of which would be to "put these public enemies on the spot," by identifying and exposing them to the contempt of the communities which they infest and contaminate.

The Kenney resolution declares it to be "the sense of the Senate and House of Representatives" that, before assuming the duties of his position or office, each teacher, officer or other employe of a public school or public institution of higher learning shall take an oath of allegiance to the United States of America.

The proposed oath would pledge all such public servants to support the Constitution of the United States and faithfully to discharge the duties of the public service of education with which it was their high privilege to be affiliated.

* * *

New York Teachers Shock the Country

UNDER the terms of this legislative proposal, the Secretary of State would be directed to transmit a copy of this resolution to the governors of the several states. It would then be for the state to determine, through the Legislature, whether the sense of the Congress in this regard should become the will of the state.

The fact that 700 teachers in the public schools of the City of New York have signed a petition to the Governor of the State of New York to veto a bill recently passed by his Legislature requiring public school teachers to take the oath of allegiance has naturally shocked the country.

It is doing more than that. It is prompting the people of other cities and states and the members of both Houses of Congress to find out whether the sapping expedition against public education in New York City is one of many such expeditions working beneath the surface of schools, colleges and universities the country over.

Why any American teacher in any school, college or university under the flag should object to taking the oath of allegiance, the plain people of this country will find it hard to understand. The plain people entrust the education of their children largely to the teachers. The training of the children for the duties of citizenship is largely in the hands of the teachers. And the greatest of all the powers which a teacher possesses is the power of example. If a teacher is unwilling to give a pledge to support the Constitution of the United States, what kind of a citizen can such a teacher be expected to train?

* * *

Slacker Oaths Are Advocated

IT HAS long been known that the snakes of disloyalty were nesting on many a college campus. The evidence is on record that in Minnesota, Indiana, Ohio and the state of New York there are today teachers on the faculties of certain tax-exempted institutions of higher learning and on the faculties of some public institutions of the same sort who are actually signing themselves and agitating the signing of slacker oaths by their pupils.

Just who these so-called educators are, and why they are allowed to remain on the payroll of an American educational institution will be quickly revealed if hearings are held by a House committee on the Kenney resolution.

Hearings on this timely legislative proposal would also help to turn the light of patriotic publicity upon conditions in schools, colleges and universities, all over the country, which are harboring teachers or officers who put themselves above the oath of allegiance and above the obligation to answer when the country calls its defenders to the flag.

Now also would be a good time—before the Congressional campaign starts—to get on record any Senator or Representative in Congress who holds so lightly the obligations of citizenship as to sympathize with any so-called American teacher who is unwilling to take the oath of allegiance or unwilling to teach its obligations to serve in peace and war "the mother of us all," whether we be her sons by birth or by adoption.
